Pleasanton fair buffs tote bucks

When people come to the Alameda County Fair in Pleasanton they often pack a bulging wallet. but not necessarily for "thinning" at the race track.

A survey taken during Fair-time last summer indicates the average person will spend at least $5 and as much as $30. Purchases at the various concessions will often add up to $50 or more.

Fair directors reviewed the survey last week but, claiming it was not carried out with professional expertise, elected to take no action on it.

According to the Fair Association's assistant manager, Pete Bailey, the survey was handled by several young people who talked with Fair-goers over a period of several days.

A total of 5,442 men, women and children were interviewed.

Thirty per cent of that number did not go near the race track.

This is partially born out in the average daily Fairgrounds and race track attendance counts. Race crowds often were about one-third of the total attendance for the day.

Most of those going to the race track spent anywhere from one to four hours guessperting on the thoroughbreds.

The average Fair-goer polled spent between two and three hours on the grounds. A check of the attendance-at-attractions would indicate most viewed the exhibits and/or the stage entertainment.

Of all the attractions, the least popular was the Demolition Derby, usually staged on the final Sunday. Even the livestock, 4-H and FFA exhibits outdrew the annual crash-bang session on the track.

While almost everyone polled said they purchased food and some sort of trinket, household good or leather good at the Fair, few had suggestions for added attractions.

But those suggested ran the gamut from "more rock groups" (the most popular response), to more beer booths, a swimming pool, a rodeo, mobile home display, pretzel-maker, sky diving, night-time dancing and kissing booth!

But 42 per cent, perhaps satiated by corn dogs, slush cones and non-stop entertainment, had no preferences.

Which could come as good news to directors who are looking at the annual budget with an anxious eye.

Brown's reaction to Jarvis bid

Call to halt city hall expansion

PLEASANTON — City manager Clay Brown is recommending council reject all bids for the proposed Civic Center expansion project "in view of the fiscal uncertainty confronting the city through the Jarvis-Gann Initiative."

The city has received five bids for the project, but Brown, in a report to council, noted that it will be impossible to complete the expansion if the tax initiative passes.

Brown also released yesterday a report on the controversial property tax relief initiative's possible effects on Pleasanton — The initiative, which he calls "vague and poorly written," would cut the city's general fund by 38 percent if passed by voters June 6.

The initiative would cut property tax to 1 percent of the 1975-76 assessed value. The county would collect the funds and disperse the revenue to various taxing districts such as schools and cities. Pleasanton now receives 14 percent of all property tax collected.

Brown assumes the city would receive the same percentage of the 1 percent collected should the initiative pass. A budget cut of $2.5 million, he says, is the best the city can expect.

City Attorney Harvey Levine has announced the city could not put a tax increase measure on the ballot to counteract the Jarvis-Gann initiative — as council had hoped.

The tax relief applies across the board to homeowners, business and industry.

It would benefit business and industry, which could expect 56 percent property tax relief, most, according to a staff study by the state Assembly Ways and Means Committee.

Many initiative supporters have called reports similar to Brown's scare tactics.

"There is no way this city, or any city, could have 38 percent fat in their budget," Brown retorts.

Services will have to be effected in Pleasanton, he says.

"Certainly every service will be touched somehow — depending on how essential they are. But there is no way we can continue to provide all the services residents now have if our budget is cut that drastically."

Brown supports Senator Peter Behr's (R-Marin) bill, SB-1, now in the Assembly. That bill would reduce property tax for homeowners by 40 percent, but would also levy a re-sale tax when an individual sold a home.

SB-1 would not cut the city's budget, but would hold down the level of property tax increases, according to Brown's analysis.

The city manager expects to send a second report on the initiative to council in a few weeks.

Ginger Vallandigham of Livermore has been caring for two lambs, daughters of one of Tilden Park's favorite residents, brought to Pleasanton for emergency surgery this month.

Park calls on Pleasanton vet

Special delivery for spring lambs

This is the story of two spring lambs — twins no less — born in the Valley.

They were delivered in Pleasanton Feb. 1 after their mother, a popular resident of the children's petting zoo at Tilden Park in Oakland, was brought to local veterinarian Jim Burns.

He delivered the twins, both female, by caesarian section because the ewe had developed pregnancy toxemia, a blood sugar-type of disorder resembling insulin crisis in humans that led to difficulty in giving birth.

Caesarian birth is a fairly common operation and the twins were delivered without complication then turned over to Ginger Vallandigham who has bottle-fed them goats milk, every two hours at first and now every five hours, since their third day.

Vallandigam has cared for other animals for Burns in the past so the task was not new.

"She's so good about caring for these little guys; they're coming along nicely bottle-fed," said Burns.

The ewe also recovered nicely, thank you, and stays with the lambs though she is unable to nurse them.

"She's very domesticated and follows you around, almost like a puppy," Burns said of the mother.

"She still knows she's the mommy and is very protective," added Vallandigham.

Whether the lambs return to Tilden immediately has not been decided, partly because Vallandigham is trying to put the lambs on a formula the park can obtain more easily than goat's milk.

Council reverses builder point plan

PLEASANTON — City council reversed itself last night and unanimously voted to give housing developers points for contributing cash to the city's capital imdprovement fund.

The action puts the controversial section back into the proposed growth management program's point rating system. It is that system which the city will use to determine which housing developments will be approved over the next 20 years.

But council members could not agree on how much money developers should contribute to get the 15 points. They left that question unanswered until the next time they discuss the residential allocation program.

Several weeks ago council cut that section from the program by a 3 to 2 vote. Although last night's action indicated that member Bill Herlihy, vice mayor Ken Mercer and mayor Bob Philcox had changed their minds, their intentions became confused when they declined to assign any cash amount to the points.

Pete Stark

Stark says he'll seek fourth term

Rep. Pete Stark has announced he is running for a fourth term as congressman of the Ninth District.

Stark said he will campaign on his record of legislative accomplishments, voting history and service to his constituents.

The 46-year-old Democrat says he will work to achieve cutbacks in the nation's military budget.

The Ninth Congressional District includes Livermore, Pleasanton, Dublin, San Ramon, and Sunol, and other parts of Alameda County.

Two punch out, media follows

Santa Rita escape becomes an event

PLEASANTON — Santa Rita Jail was on the receiving end of a "media blitz" yesterday as puzzled sheriff's deputies tried to figure out why the almost routine escape of two inmates brought a deluge of phone calls from wire services and the whirr of television cameras to the jail's front gate.

"You tell me what the big deal is," said Deputy Jim McGrail, who spent most of yesterday glued to a telephone giving details of the escape to Bay Area newspapers and radio and television stations.

Front gate guard Larry Chavarria said he was surprised to see cameramen and reporters from three San Francisco television stations pull up to film the outside of the jail for a "voiceover" — footage of the jail while a reporter tells the story. "I'll be on Channel 7 tonight," he laughed. "Watch for me."

Surprise at the amount of media coverage was genuine because escapes from the aging facility are not what most people would call "news." Last year Santa Rita averaged more than one escape every 10 days. In 1976, inmates departed the county jail at a rate faster than once every five days.

The two missing inmates filled the gap in a slow news day by punching a hole in the roof of their barracks and fleeing the jail early yesterday, officials said.

James Edgar Arwood, 20, of Fremont, and Magdiel Gates, 30, of Vallejo were awaiting trial in the medium security barracks when the escape occurred.

Arwood was charged with burglary and two prior escapes from undisclosed prisons, while Gates was awaiting trial for grand theft, auto theft and other minor charges.

The two apparently broke a hole in the sheetrock roof of the 30-bed barracks, crawled up on top, jumped to the ground and cleared a 12-foot chain-link fence topped with barbed wire to make good their escape.

It was unclear what the inmates used to make the hole or why no other inmates followed their lead, officials said.

The white arrow points to the medium - security barracks from which two inmates escaped Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center early yesterday. The horizontal roadway at top is Interstate 580.

Stark bidding for new term

Rep. Pete Stark (D-Oakland) has filed for re-election to the Ninth Congressional District.

Stark will be seeking his fourth term to represent the district, which includes Livermore, Pleasanton, Dublin, San Ramon, Sunol, Castro Valley, North Hayward, San Lorenzo, San Leandro, East Oakland and Alameda.

The former banker was recently named "the strongest supporter of tax reform" on the Ways and Means Committee by Taxpayers With Representation, a citizens' group. That committee shapes tax legislation in the House.

Stark was instrumental in creating an exchange of American prisoners held in Mexican jails for Mexicans imprisoned in the United States last year. He termed the act a victory for human rights, saying that an investigation by his staff uncovered abuses of American prisoners held south of the border.

He also pressured for a full investigation into allegedly unsafe conditions at the Oak Knoll Hospital in Oakland after a Dublin man died there under suspicious circumstances. That investigation led to a comprehensive review of medical staffing throughout the Navy, Stark said.

The 46-year-old Wisconsin native worked to restrict flights carrying plutonium after it was learned that such shipments were being made in and out of Livermore in connection with work being done at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory.

Stark also offered an amendment which resulted in improved methods for resolving labor disputes for employees of the University of California.

Stark lists his primary goals for 1978 as welfare reform, cutbacks in the military budget, work towards a national medical care program, and tax reduction and reform.

Author's Day stirs pupils

DUBLIN— A tradition may have been established at Nielsen School Thursday....one that can only result in more youngsters being "turned on" to reading and exploring nature.

The event was Author's Day' organized by reading specialist Betty Detweiler and Nielsen librarian Joan Loder, and featuring author and long-time Hayward city librarian Gladys Conklin.

Mrs. Conklin met with primary grade classes throughout the day, talking about the insect world and how she came to author 24 books.

A highlight of the day came when the 80 years-young Mrs. Conklin was greeted by Jeanne Oliveira, now a second grade teacher at the school. As a frequent visitor to the library during her grade school days, Miss Oliveira had come to know Mrs. Conklin.

Mrs. Conklin has authored childrens books ranging from "How Insects Grow" to "Tarantula," "The Bug Club" and "Journey of a Gray Whale."

A library science graduate of the University of Washington 52 years ago, Mrs. Conklin served as children's librarian at the Hayward Public Library. She had formed a science club called the "Bug Club" which met every Friday after school at the library. Children in the club studied insects and tried to raise their own specimens. Many of her books are dedicated to children who were in the Bug Club.

Gladys Conklin discusses world of insects with Jeanne Oliveira's second grade class.

Her books are factual, based on extensive research. Mrs. Conklin has traveled many summers in Mexico and in East Africa to further her research information.

She was children's librarian in Hayward from 1950 to 1965 and with the Los Angeles Public Library from 1933 to 1942.

Now retired and residing in San Lorenzo with her husband, Mrs. Conklin is a member of the American Library Association, California Library Association, and Women's National Book Association.

At the conclusion of the day's classes Thursday, Mrs. Conklin was guest of honor at a tea organized by the Nielsen PTA.

Mrs. Detweiler indicated a follow-up Author's Day in the spring would be devoted to books and authors of interest to fifth and sixth graders.

Historical units' aid

OAKLAND — Alameda County supervisors agreed on a process for historical groups to apply for county money this week.

They didn't outline the process, but they key appears to be the use of the county's parks, recreational and historical advisory commission as a screening group for all applications.

Supervisors voted 4-1 for that process with Supervisor Fred Cooper dissenting because he earlier opposed adding the historical panelists to what had been simply the park and recreation commission.

The new process is expected to go into effect for the coming fiscal year requests. Supervisor Valerie Raymond wants to allocate as much as $30,000 a year for these projects, taken out of the county's annual advertising budget, but no decision was made yesterday about any dollar amounts.

The county previously allocated $10,000 annually out of the advertising budget for the Amador - Livermore Valley Historical Society.

Preliminary figures show that the average retail price of beef, measured on an all-cut basis, climbed to almost $1.47 a pound last month, a two-cent gain from December.

For these kids, a race to learn

MERCED (AP) — Lin Snow teaches the three "Rs" a little differently. For her, its reading 'riting and racing, and her students love it.

The 30-year-old elementary school teacher, who says she's the first woman to race stock cars against men here, is almost certainly the first to inject racing lingo into the classroom in this Central California area. Mrs. Snow says her hobby helps her communicate with students, heightens their interest in school work and has earned her the respect of her students. She even uses racing to make some monotonous lessons a little more interesting to her third and fourth graders.

"The kids really get excited when we have math lessons or language stories based on racing," she says.

"For example, in math lessons we talk about the speed of cars, how to figure out time trials and how to figure the finishing orders of cars. We make up problems based on speed and times."

Mrs. Snow says students write stories imagining they are race car drivers. "We assign each child a car number. They draw and cut out their cars and write stories about the races between the cars in the class."

And car racing even dominates some lighter moments of class time.

"We play learning games, and when the children score points in the game it moves their cars a little forward on the race track on the bulletin board."

Mrs. Snow claims to have had pretty tame interests until attending a stock car race at the county fairgrounds about two years ago.

"It was the night of the powder puff derby," she recalls. "I've always liked driving, so racing looked like something I could get into."

After her introduction to racing, Mrs. Snow got her National Association for Stock Car Racing license and started meeting all the racers in the pits.

She borrowed a man's car and finished fifth in the next powder puff derby, a women'sonly event.

She continued to race with women in a borrowed car and hung around the track, introducing herself to racers and asking if they would let her borrow their car for the powder puff.

The next year she had steady use of a car in exchange for helping with upkeep and trying to get more sponsors and parts.

But even when she could race in every powder puff derby, which was usually about once a month, Mrs. Snow wasn't happy.

"I enjoyed racing so much I wanted to do it more than just in the powder puff, so when I was able to race on a weekly basis, I started racing with men," she says. She prefers to say she races "with the men" rather than against them.

In her first race with the men last April, she took seventh place, and has been going strong ever since, except for recovering from a broken arm suffered in a motorcycle accident.

Mrs. Snow says she enjoys racing "just for the thrill of it," and is in the process of readying her car for next season.

"I'm certainly not in it for the money," she says. "I've spent $2,500 on cars in the last two years and won $43."

New school head faces fiscal woes

The need is the same, so are the procedures, only the times have changed.

Four years ago this May Rudy Gatti startled Amador and Pleasanton School District residents by resigning as superintendent to return to the Santa Clara Unified School District.

Though Dr. Bruce Newlin's resignation in December was not as surprising, the search for a new superintendent of the 10,000 - student population and $18.4 million budget districts begins anew.

The boar of the respective districts will chart the same course, however.

As in May of 1974, the boards have hired a consultant (Ferd Kiesel) and he will seek the help of two others in the education field to search-out applications for the position which will be advertised as $37,500 a year with fringe benefits.

But in those short four years, problems confronting the two districts have changed.

When Gatti left, the districts were beginning to crest enrollmentwise and the financial hazards that now face all public school districts were not nearly as visible and real as they are now.

For the next month Kiesel, with the assistance of advertisements in educational journals, will look for qualified applicants.

The applications will be screened the week of April 15-22 with the number being reduced to about 20.

Local school board members will review the applications and select six to eight of them for interviews the last week in April. Trustees (possibly just representatives of both boards) plan to visit the communities of the top candidate(s) sometime between May 8 and 12, talking to teachers and administrators who have worked with the candidate.

Target date for appointment is sometime in the period between May 17 and 30.

Award winners

Amador High award winners, from left, Susan Sturmer, Brent Cullimore, Terri Crawford, and Mary Frapwell. Above, certificate recipients of Bank of America certificates. See story at left.

Two present assistant superintendents, Carl Krause and Neil Sweeney, opined back in December they would "probably" seek the Position.

Both have been with the districts for many years, Sweeney having spent practically his entire career in the local districts since graduating from St. Mary's.

There is reason to believe that some of the applicants, quite possibly some of the "final 20" will be women.

The fairly general "profile" worked up by trustees for Kiesel shows the "ideal" candidate as being someone with teaching and administrative experience as both elementary and secondary levels, a strong business management background, a personality that will "break the ice" easily with employees, district residents and fellow administrators, alike, and, possibly, a verbal commitment to stay for at least three years.

The latter proved one of the sore points during the "in put" sessions held by the two districts.

Pleasanton board president Betty Nostrand indicated this latter point would be broached with Kiesel in the weeks to come as they got closer to the screening phase.

ABAG move fails

Lesher News Bureau

BERKELEY — A minority of a special ABAG task force Wednesday tried to junk a set of controversial land use controls proposed for cleaning up air pollution in the Bay Area, but failed by a one-vote margin.

The motion to delet a set of 47 proposals that would control local zoning and housing development was made late in the day at a meeting of ABAG.'s Environmental Management Task Force, a 46-member policy-setting body that is developing the association's huge environmetntal management plan.

The vote failed, 16 to 15. Two of Contra Costa's three representatives on the EMTF — Tom Corcoran of Richmond and Supervisor Robert Schroder, Walntut Creek — voted for the motion. Concord Mayor Richard LaPointe was absent.

The taskf force finally voted to continue its discussion of the plan to March 8, which is the deadline for the group to make its final recommendations to ABAGs regional planning committee.

If the motion had carried, the entire set of land use regulations as proposed by ABAG's staff would have been dropped from the air quality management plan.

The net effect of those controls, as projected by ABAG, would be to locate more people nearer their jobs and increase housing density in cities and existing suburbs, thereby cutting the average commute length and reduce autop pollution.

But since their first unveiling, the land use controls have done nothing but generate conrtroversy among local governments, who fear their power over development is being usurped by ABAG.

Contra Costa County officials have sharply criticized the proposals on those grounds.

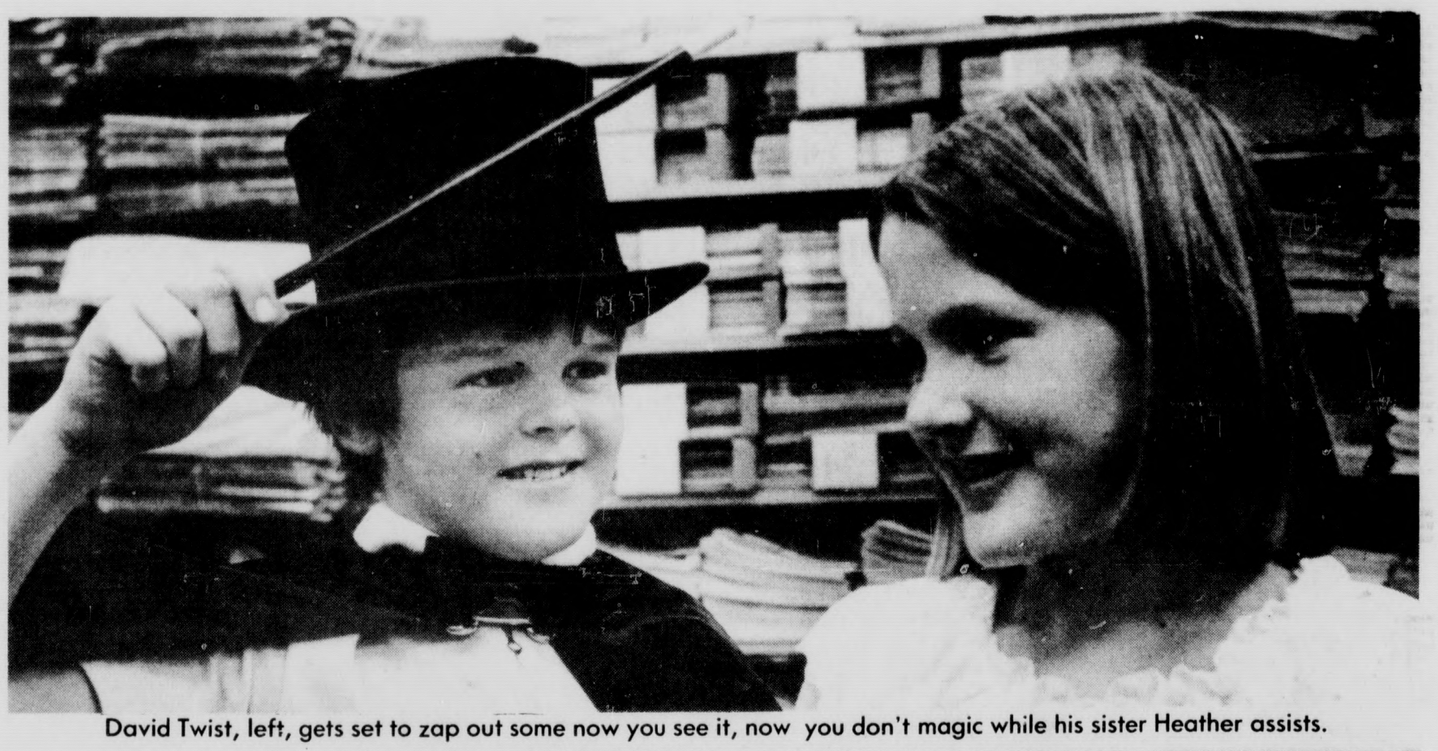
Only 33 members of the task force were in attendance Wednesday With a full roster at the next meetin, enough votes may be mustered to carry the same motion.

In another development, the task force slightly liberalized another portion of the air qulality plan that would have placed tight pollution controls over Bay Area industries.

A proposal that would have required all industries to acquire the "best available conrtrol technology" to clean up pollution had been made. ABAG planners estimated that would cost indusrtty $30 million a year, which might have been passed on to sonsumers in higher costs for consumer goods.

But under prodding from some of its members, notably Alameda County Supervisors Fred Cooper, the task force dropped the word "best" from the proposal and said that industries must use "available control technology."

The propsal, however, says that those controls must still reduce industrial pollution in the Bay Area by a rate of 225 tons a day by thyear 1985, a reduction of nearly 25 percent over the current emission rate.



David Twist, left, gets set to zap out some now you see it, now you don't magic while his sister Heather assists.

Rites of spring

These warm sunny days are leading the minds of Diana Guthrie (left), Kerrie Ely (center) and Pleasanton recreation department director Bob Caporusso towards homeruns. The department is sponsoring a three-day softball clinic March 4, 11 and 18 from 2 to 4 p.m. each day. A $1 fee covers the entire clinic and refreshments will be served daily. Girls between the ages of 9 and 15 will be assisted in the skills of batting, pitching, catching and all the elements of the game. Preregistratfon is open now at the recreation office, 200 Bernal Avenue.

No 'old-look' stop lights

PLEASANTON — Plans to place antique-style facades on the new Main Street traffic signals have backfired.

The young cast maker hired by the city to make the signal heads designed to match the coach lamp street lights on Main cannot be reached.

The city paid Terry Jackson a downpayment of $500 last summer to begin work on four signal heads for the liRhts at the intersections of Main and Neal Sts. and Main and St. John Sts.

Jackson, who was recommended to the city by several larger casting firms, has not cast any of the heads, hasn't returned the traffic engineering department's phone calls and can't be found in his Antioch home.

In a report going to city council next Tuesday, director of engineering Don Sooby recommends the city drop plans to place old-style heads on the signals and leave the modern lights as they are.

The city attorney's office is still rying to recover the $500 payment from Jackson.

Two other reasonable alternatives are listed in Sooby's report to council. The city could search for another company to cast the specially designed aluminum heads — or the city could hire a fabricator to make the heads out of sheet metal.

One fabricator has offered to make the heads for $3,750. That fee would be $1,430 more than the city planned to pay Jackson.

But Sooby feels the signals are "unobtrusive" as they are now designed and is asking council to accept the Main Street traffic signal project "as complete."

Sooby said his department will continue monitoring the signal timing and make adjustments as they seem necessary.

Several residents have noted to The Times that it takes longer to drive down Main Street now than it did before the signals were placed. That's true, according to Sooby, but he says the signals benefit greatly those drivers trying to turn onto Main from the side streets.

As for the old-style signal facades, Sooby calls the situation "unfortunate and regretable."

Bobcat law

SACRAMENTO (AP) — With the price of bobcat pelts soaring to $200 to $350, a California legislator says they should be made fully protected mammals.

State Sen. John Holmdahl, DCastro Valley, introduced a bill Wednesday that would do just that for bobcats, which are now classed as non-game animals.

Holmdahl issued a statement saying bobcats are being needlessly trapped and shot "for fur coats and just the fun of killing them."

He said with other species of spotted cats being protected, furriers are turning to bobcats. He quoted the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service as saying bobcats are over-harvested in many states, and their numbers are declining.

His SB 1581 would permit the importation of bobcat pelts, with permission of the state Fish and Game Commission.

Residents mold parks

PLEASANTON — Citizen input played a major part in the park master plan approved by the park and recreation commission this week, according to city landscape architect Al Dutchover.

The master plan revision for the sports and recreation park off Hopyard Road was originally initiated by commissioners who felt a proposed swimming and sailing lagoon wasn't necessary. The lagoon had been put in the plan before the Aquatic Center was built several years ago.

But residents attending public hearings also made suggestions for change that were adopted Wednesday.

Dutchover re-designed the proposed parking in order to move Little League fields further away from Pleasanton Valley homes. A proposed model airplane flying field was cut fFom the plan after citizens complained that the planes would be too noisy.

The master plan includes restrooms, concessions, various sports fields and courts, picnic areas, a nature study area and tot lots. The planning commission and the city council must still approve the 20-year master plan before it is formally adopted.

Bright outlook

Despite recent controversey the state of public housing in the valley appears good. The commitment by local agencies is assurance that these big city suburbs won't ignore the less affluent.

There are difficulties, to be sure. Tenants at Livermore's Leahy Square grumbled long and loud last year, and forced the dismissal of city housing director Robert Suckling. In Pleasanton the criticism still hasn't subsided at Kottinger Place, where an elderly resident died, and her emergency alarm was discovered to be defective.

Housing authorities are working to correct problems, however, in Livermore a new director was hired, one who went directly to the tenants and listened Yo their needs. In Pleasanton, new alarms and a live — in manager have been approved for Kottinger.

Of greater importance, the commitment to public housing goes beyond emergency stop — gap adminstration.

In Livermore there is talk of a new housing coalition that would plan for the needs of elderly and low income residents in the future. In Pleasanton, officials have fought to insert public housing provisions in the city's growth management plan. And of course the drive to replace worn out Komandorski on the Pleasanton — Dublin border continues.

Officials of the Pleasanton Housing Authority are pursuing evey avenue in search of funds to build 150 new units there.

Throughout the valley the housing policy seems to be one of gearing for future needs, instead of maintenance and crisis reaction. It's a healthy attitude and one that will pay off for all residents.

Math dilemma

Reading isn't Johnny's only problem!

A calm but firm alarm is being sounded by the mathematics educators of the state, especially to school administrators and parents.

In the last 10 years, math scores for college entrance exams have tumbled — in some instances — 20 points.

Math professor Gerald L. Alexanderson of the University of Santa Clara led a year-long national study on why "Johnny" and "Jane" have great difficulty adding, subtracting, multiplying and dividing.

The committee brought together members of the Mathematical Association of America and the National Council for Teachers of Mathematics, organizations with a combined membership of 100,000 math teachers and professional mathematicians throughout the United States.

The year-long study produced a series of recommendations that the group now hopes to implement as part of a "remedy."

Topping the prescription is a committee recommendation to put greater emphasis on homework assignments — with active parental support. "Parents have to get involved," Alexanderson stresses. "Their participation is critical. They should encourage their children to set aside sufficient time each day to complete their assignments and then help to insure that the work is turned in."

Alexanderson said his committee found that most of the teachers interviewed nationwide reported students today are doing less homework. "You can't learn math by hearing about it," he adds.

Though he believes teachers are doing their jobs, Alexanderson thinks a combination of societal problems are largely to blame. "Too much television, grade inflation, a tolerance for increased absenteeism, lowering of demand levels in textbooks, pressures for promotion whether a student has mastered the work or not, and the reduction in homework," all add up to make a very big problem he contends.

The committee's findings also suggest the slump is linked to the fact that children today aren't reading as much. "You can't solve math problems if you can't read. A student has to understand what is being asked before he can translate the English language into the language of mathematics."

Asked if the fault may rest with greater reliance on hand calculators, Alexanderson said there has been some concern, especially at the elementary school levels. "But calculators are in broad use in colleges and I don't think there is much to be worried about."

The committee concluded in its report that the calculator should supplement rather than supplant.

But Alexanderson adds, "I would like to know that a student is able to do the problem by hand if the battery goes dead!"

He concludes by noting the committee is "trying to encourage high school mathematics departments to reexamine their programs. All we can do is make our specific recommendations concerning curriculum and how schools handle their students in regard to such matters as homework and grade inflation. The rest is really up to them."

SAILING TO NEW ZEALAND — In all of the world's waters' surely there are none more beautiful than those of the South Pacific.

From the breaththaking beauty of Tahiti, west to the "friendly islands" of Tonga, north a little to Fiji, the storied land of Captian Bligh; and now south with one final, dazzling course through the Bay of Islands to New Zealand.

It is a symphony in color. The azure blue of Coral Sea rolling off to the horizon, there to crash with the aurora of tropical skies. Warm sun in constant battle with rain streaked clouds. A picture ever changing, and each change more beautiful than the last.

To see this vista of water, sky and land from aboard ship is to enjoy a world that is unknown to the airplane passenger. The welcome of an airport, even in these lovely islands, is nothing compared to the greeting extended the shipboard traveller as we are tempted first by the distant sight of the next port of call, then excited by the uncertainty of each harbor's challenge, and finally roped to the dock where island custom affords its unique greeting.

When your vessel is the world's largest liner, and it is making its first call at these wayside ports, then the excitment on board is soon lost in the voices and music that rise up from dockside as Queen Elizabeth 2 prepares to dock.

There will be many wonderful memories to take back with us from such a voyage as this, but none will be more lasting than the warmth of the welcome given us at each port of call along our South Pacific journey.

Oh sure, there has been the usual commercial enthusiasm over the prospect of dollar-Laden Americans come to swap their loot for native trinkets. (That relationshop was brought to startling climax by the headline in the FIJI TIMES which announced to its readers, in boldest headline tyPe, the "DAY OF THE MILLIONARIES" ... going on to explain that "Suva is preparing for its day of the millionaires today with the visit of the luxury Cunard liner Queen Elizabeth 2 ..." The QE2's passengers tried to buy up every copy of that edition to show friends back home, but regrettably we millionaires soon learned that our Yankee coins are not acceptable tender in these islands. "Paper dollars please" is all those islanders will accept, and only then after discounting our dollar by 20 percent.)

And yes, the prices in Tahiti, most particularly in the capital city of Papeete' are wild ... $1.25 American for a glass of coke. But that is little more than a tourist must learn to cope with, in the cafes and stalls that are huddled around each dock.

There are values too ... in the straw baskets and mats which we watched the people of the Vava'u Islands lace into form, and then offer us with polite pride in their handiwork. And if we wound up buying their wares, they gave us back twenty fold with their happy faces, their careful courtesy, and their music, always their music.

In Tahiti, French Polynesian dancers came on board to electrify the ship's passengers with songs that told of love, of tribal warefare from these islands troubled past, and yes, of the naked passion that is still untarnished and lovely in these islands.

In Tonga, the dancers, just as with the people of the Vava'u Islands, were less flamboyant, perhaps less aware of the commercial value of their customs. But a "war dance" performed by eight small Tonganese boys was unquestionably the most thrilling, and the most exhausting, show we ever had on shipboard.

At Suva, the pride of Fiji came to entertain us in concert. In a city crowded with its own people and with a steady flow of visiting seamen from around the world, it is noteworthy that the Fiji Police Band would be the island's outstanding troop of performers. For the thousands of islanders who late that evening jammed QE2's dock as we prepared to embark, it was difficult to tell whether it was our ship, or Fiji's talented and colorful police force, which was the real dockside attraction.

Best of all was the welcome we received while at anchor in Tonga harbor. A great fleet of leaky craft, most of them pulled by oars, came a mile or more down that long channel to swarm around QE2. Largest in that fleet was a 20-foot launch with a barge in tow. And on that barge were huddled 50 people or more, including a uniformed school band which saluted us first with their spirited rendition of "Rule Brittania", and then, for their American guests, a marvelous off-tune version of "String of Pearls."

That is one memory that will live with us forever.

State's energy future

By Ellis Henican
Time's Washington Bureau

By committing itself to a mixture of energy systems like solar, wind and hydroelectric power, researchers at the University of California argue that the state can meet all its own energy demands by the next century.

With supplies of oil and natural gas shrouded by political and economic uncertainties, such a goal of energy self-sufficiency is obvioulsy attractive. At the same time, the so-called "soft technologies" have their own drawbacks.

Here is a round-up of the new energy sources on which the UC study has focused:

Wind — Windmills could theoretically provide more than all the energy needed by California in 2025. But the UC report points out that exploiting wind to that extent would severely harm the state's scenery. (About six per cent of the state would be covered by windmills, twice the area now taken up by development.)

One more modest plan calls for 48,000 giant windmills, extending over half the Sierra Nevada. But the researchers also reject this proposal as politically and environmentally unacceptable.

Biomass — Burning garbage, sewerage, manure, timber refuge and other substances to produce liquid fuel, like methanol. The report estimates that in Califronia three-fourths of this waste is already being collected (and discarded) at great cost. With little additional effort, energy can be extracted from virtually all the State's waste, at the same time solving the disposal problems of cities, the report suggests.

As a spin-off of this plan, the UC researchers propose ocean kelp farming. The report envisions kelp beds of up to 200 square miles, anchored deep in the ocean off the Southern California coast. The kelp would then be harvested and burned at very high temperatures, producing liquid fuels.

Solar — The study reports that an immense amount of solar energy falls on California — about 500 times what the state will need in the year 2025. The researchers believe that all the hot water needed by industrial, commercial and residential users can come from solar systems on rooftops.

Heat for the inside of buildings, they say, can be provided by passive solar systems, in which sunlight passes through glass, heating a large concrete wall — naturally circulating warmth throughout the building. Even in northern regions of California, these systems might provide between 56 and 99.9 percent of the necessary heat, the report projects.

For densely populated areas where room for the solar collectors is scarce, the report suggests co-operative neighborhood systems, using waste conversion as a back-up.

Geothermal — The report explains that California is a prime location for geothermal energy — power derived from the hot water and steam trapped in the ground. The researchers note that the only geothermal plant in the nation is operated by Pacific Gas and Electric Co. at the Geysers in Northern California. Some technical and environmental problems remain to be solved, however; and geologists are unsure how oermanent is the supply of geothermal energy.

Hydroelectric — Hydropower now produces one-quarter of California's electricity, and the researchers foresee its continuing to hold a major role in the year 2025.

The report envisions upgrading the present hydroelectric system. Because hydropower is easy to store, the researchers suggest that it be used to provide electricity particularly at times of peak demand.

Ocean — Energy systems using the tides, waves, and temperature differences of the ocean, and the mixing of fresh and salt water, are under development. But because these systems are not yet ready for use, the reserachers did not include them in the study.

Fossil Fuel — The report explains that while California was once mined extensively for coal, the remaining supply is small and of low quality. Unless it is imported from outside California, coal is unlikely to have a large impact on the state's energy picture, the researchers determined.

Agree with Ebert

Editor, The Times:

Government should be run like a business.

I agree with the candidate Marlin Ebert, who stated at the Chamber meeting, that government should be run like a business. "He states, that anyone with half a business sense could find $1 million in fat, in the city budget, and it wouldn't have to come out of essential safty departments. The whole purpose of city government is to provide basic essential services and that all non-essential services can be cut back. He points out that figures given by the city mangement on the Jarvis-Intiative cutback are "a big lie."

Its about time that we get in a council member who can cut out the fat and the only candidate who is totally independent and owes nothing to anyone Can Do It For Us.

Tax juggling

Open letter to Supervisor Valerie Raymond:

Your press release on Feb. 16th revealing your opposition to the Jarvis Tax Reform (Proposition No. 13), discloses to me your incompetence as a public servant.

Responding like many of our deceitful legislators, you are attempting to scare our citizens with cut-back strategy which you hope will prompt our citizens to accept Sacramento's deceitful "Behr tax bill," and peddle this irresponsible "Behr Tax Bill," now being rushed through legislature without our voting approval, confirms that you are not acting within the canons of ethics and you should be ashamed since it provides our citizens nothing but deceitful tax jugglinp resulting in higher home prices and rents for our citizens forcing the housewife to take employment, which creates more problems.

Faced with true tax reform, you like many of our legislators, would like our citizens to believe our schools will close, our fire and police services disinergrate and the whole State disappear, which is not a fact and you know it. We citizens, are fed up with your $50.00 a month tax increases every year which also increases rents the same amount for those You have forced out of a home with your irresponsible spending.

Pursuant to the State constitution tax distribution provisions, our Government will be responsible to supply necessary funding for all essential services by priority, which mandates funds needed for our schools, fire, police, roads and hundreds of other high priority services. No funding changes for high priority services exists, since by law, the county must distribute the revenue to the districts according to law and high priority funding for this is unchanged. Remember, they have a surplus of 2½ billion dollars that they overcharged us for last year.

Once this disgraceful give-away spending is responsibly reduced, California tax payers will experience a substantial tax load reduction providing a surplus of funds for our essential higher priority services that you claimed would get the ax. Did you lie ... at taxpayers expense? In other words you are trying to do it to us again.

Nothing resist change more stubbornly than a comfortably entrenched bureaucracy intent on self preservation. The Jarvis Tax Reform will reduce funding to these give-a-way bureaucracies and free Californians of this unnecessary tax load, which will make our government representatives responsible economic managers, addressed to responsible government, which is something we have never been able to do unitl the Jarvis Tax Reform gave us the tool. Vote Yes On Proposition No. 13.

Kids and phone

Editor, The Times:

An open letter to all parents of children who are often home alone with the telephone. Do you advise your children that the phone is not a toy? Do you tell your children and teenagers that you can lose your telephone service in your home when they abuse phone courtesy? Do you tell them it is illegal to make calls to strangers and be cutesy or obscene? Do your children know their chums tell on them and that all of you can be prosecuted?

The telephone company, the law, the phone subscriber are all against abuse of telephone use.

It's not cool to be a fool on the phone when no ones home.

Positioning: key to ballot

By happenstance the volatile property tax initiative sponsored by Howard K. Jarvis will be assigned No. 13. In the camps of the opposition that has been cause for great rejoicing. The belief is that the drawing of the traditionally "unlucky" number will insure defeat of the measure.

Then, too, there is the theory that the further down on the ballot a proposal is placed, the less chance it has of passage. Voters, it is thought, quickly tire of voting "yes" and start stamping "no" as the ballot numbers progress. For that reason No. 1 on the ballot has always been considered the most desireable placement, so much so that on more than one occasion the Legislature has designated two proposals on the same ballot as No. 1, distinguishing them as "1" and "1-A".

But an analyses of ballot propositions over a period of more than 50 years suggests that neither position on the ballot not the old saw of superstition can be relied upon to fend off the Jarvis threat.

Since 1920 there have been a total of 587 ballot propositions submitted to the voters in 34 elections. Of that number 334 have been approved for an overall win record of 56 per cent.

While it is true that propositions closer to the top of the ballot generally have a better win record than those further down, it is not an absolute.

For example, No. 1 has an overall success of 69⅔ per cent but No. 25 has carried three out of the three times it has been on the ballot for a perfect record. And No. 5 has proved to be a greater jinx than most with a far below average record of only 45 per cent.

The study also dispels the notion that the longer the ballot the less chance measures have. In 1964, 17 propositions were submitted and 15 passed. Yet in the 1970 primary with only 8 proposals on the ballot, five failed to get a majority.

The average number of measures to be submitted over this period has been slightly more than 17 with the awesome number of 30 in 192 being the most, dwindling down to only one at a primary in one election.

Although the results of that 1922 election might tend to support the theory that voters tire when the ballot is too long since they nixed the last four propositions that year, the experience of 1926 offsets that. Despite 28 measures being presented in that election the voters gleefully approved the last eight proposals in a row.

But what about "unlucky" 13? That number has represented proposals in 26 elections and has won in (coincidence?) 13, for a 50 per cent success.

Since that is less than the overall average of 56 per cent and considerable less than the 69⅔ per cent record of No. 1, Jarvis opponents might claim some credence for their contention that the number will prove to be bad luck for Jarvis.

But, No. 13 has won 4 out of its last five times out since 1970 while No. 1 has only been successful in three of those five outings. Since these results reflect the tenor of voting in this decade rather than a period of more than a half century of balloting, the inclination is to give them more weight.

Also in 1970, No. 13 racked up one of the greatest victories in ballot history, winning by 83.5 per cent. The issue then? A property tax measure extending tax exemptions for disabled war veterans.

Berry's World

"Mr. Jordan is too busy to return your call, but the president will call you back in ten minutes, congressman."

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: We're so upset because our only son has dropped out of college to be a hard hat. We had such plans for him and have made many sacrifices so he could follow in his father's footsteps and become a doctor. Now, he wants to be a laborer. He also plans to get married soon and start his family while he's still young, and I might say, still on his father's payroll. Of course, we can't forbid him to marry or to follow his own career choice, but it's breaking his father's heart. E.B.

DEAR E.B.: We have to learn to see our children as separate individuals and to admire them for what they are, rather than for what they decide to do professionally. We really should learn to think of ourselves and of all human beings in these terms. One of the reasons so many men and some women have serious difficulties when they retire is that they identify themselves only through their work. This is dangerous and can lead to many problems.

It might interest you to know that management professor Charles Weaver conducted a survey to study job satisfaction and learned that laborers find their jobs more satisfying than anyone else — more than managers, clerks or salesmen. And professional or technical workers enjoy their jobs less than anyone else.

Many young people today seem to be moving against the highly competitive world of their fathers and opting for a simpler life with more time for their families and their own personal happiness. Your son may have made the right choice. At least, he deserves the chance to find out.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: We have three daughters. Each time I was pregnant my husband wanted a boy. This irritated me because it seemed like a classic example of male chauvinism. I hate that in my husband, and in anyone else, for that matter. He complains because he thinks the girls are tomboys. I was considered a tomboy myself. Now, my mother - in - law worries because she thinks my husband's longing for boys may make my girls homosexual. I feel three children is enough, but my husband wants more and I know it's because he still is hoping for a son. T.A.

DEAR T.A.: It may not help to soften your irritation, but sexism still exists in preferences for children, especially for the first, even in the most liberated men and women. The movement toward sexual equality has had no effect on the traditional preference of parents for boys.

If you're not anxious to have another child, it would be unwise to become pregnant just because your husband is hoping for a son. You are the one who will probably spend the most time with the child. The child who is not wanted by both parents almost always suffers emotional and psychological damage.

Encourage your husband to accept your daughters as individuals without burdening them with rigid sex roles. They should not have to try to be little boys in order to please him. They should be proud to be little girls and should be able to develop freely as such. Their sexual identity should be accepted and taken for granted; they should not have to prove it in any way or by specific behavior. If they are treated and loved as individuals and allowed to be themselves, it's unlikely they will be homosexual.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am female, 37 years old, and very "pot-bellied." As far back as I can recall, no matter how thin I was, I was pot-bellied.

I faithfully start to exercise and to watch my diet, but results take so long that I become discouraged. Also, I come from a large family with the pot-bellied problem, especially the females. I have heard that physical shapes are hereditary and this adds to my discouragement.

I had my second baby last year. I gained way too much. I went from 137 to 182 pounds. I am now down to 148, but I can't seem to get any lower. I should weigh about 125 pounds.

Please explain the pot-belly heredity idea and if it is possible to become flat as we should all be.

DEAR READER — Congratulations on getting rid of 34 pounds of fat. That takes will power and you have demonstrated that you od have your share — enough to do the rest of the job.

Yes, there are familial characteristics that affect body shape. You even see this in animals. The example I like to use is the difference between beef cattle and dairy cattle. You can breed characteristics, so of course the same thing happens in people.

That doesn't mean you can't do something about it. You can but it may be harder. It may mean that you have to stay extra lean to avoid this family characteristic.

The exercises many people do are not adequate. Sit ups are fine for the upper abdomen but they do not help the lower abdomen. You have to do various forms of leg lift exercises to affect the "pot" area.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 21 years old and have been shaving for about four years. My beard is normal everywhere except in the mustache area where my growth is sparse.

Is there any treatment that would encourage beard growth in this area? I would like to grow a mustache.

DEAR READER — Hair distribution is often dependent upon inherited factors. Remember that the North American Indians did not have long flowing beards or handlebar mustaches. Why? Well they pulled out what hair they had and they had very little to begin with.

It is true that if you have the inherited characteristics to have lots of hair but do not have the hormones to stimulate hair growth, you might still have less hair on your face and lack the normal male pattern hair distribution. But there would be other characteristics of inadequate hormone production in that case.

So what can you do? Nothing that would be beneficial. Perhaps you will have more hair as you get older. Barbers always used to like to shave the "college boys" when barbers still gave shaves, because they tended to have soft beards and were and "easy shave." So time may solve your problem.

This coming year you may be drawn into a dynamic alliance with an enterprising cohort. As a team you'll click remarkably well. Each will add zest to the other's life.

PISCES (Feb.20-March 20) Speak up when it comes time to divvy up the shares of any venture today. No one else should tell you what your efforts are worth.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be critical in analysis of situations today. Over optimism is the currency of fools, so don't look for more than you can possibly receive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Hard work and perspiration are the instruments of gain for you today. If you bank on your profile or good fortune, you'll come home empty-handed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Weigh things in your mind before accepting or attempting them today. Your brain is still the best computer that exists.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't be so overcome by the sizzle that you forget the steak today. Make certain the sparkle doesn't outshine the value of an object.

LEO (July 23-Aug.22) Don't count on pals for an honest opinion today. For some reason, they're prone to tell you what they feel would please you rather than the facts.

VIRGO (Aug.23-Sept.22) Nothing is more precious than your health and well-being. If you pay close attention to sensible habits today you'll save yourself much grief in the future.

LIBRA (Sept.23-Oct.23) Investigate any fiscal ventures before you invest on the word of someone you know. It's your money, not that of the tipster.

SCORPIO (Oct.24-Nov.22) Like a balloon, tMe family budget will blow sky-high if you put too much pressure on it. Look for ways to let some of the air out instead of pumping it up.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov.23-Dec.21) Make no pledges in exchange for others' favors or services unless you are sure you can keep them. If they come through, you're honor-bound to do so, too.

CAPRICORN (Dec.22-Jan.19) Opportunity only knocks once and it may not come back for awhile. If I were you, I'd have my ear glued to the door today so I don't miss the rap.

West's three spade call was one of those desperation bids that are occasionally made in match-point duplicate. It did disrupt the North-South bidding a trifle and got them to six notrump when North just bid it. It also gave South the key to success.

South won the first trick with dummy's queen of spades; led the jack of clubs for a successful finesse and continued with the nine. When West followed to the second club South knew that he had started with exactly two clubs. It also seemed like a reasonable assumption that even a desperado would hold seven spades for his three spade bid. How many diamonds did he hold ?

There was a way to find out. South cashed dummy's ace of hearts and continued with the deuce. West won with the queen over South's jack and led a second spade.

South cashed dummy's king of hearts and queen of clubs. Now he had his count on the West hand — 7-3-1-2 distribution. He played dummy's queen of diamonds, lead a second diamond and finessed his nine after East followed low to bring home a slam that would not have been made without that three spade bid to guide declarer.

Pesticides kill bees, farmers hurting

MADERA (AP) — Each year in California, tens of thousands of beehives become mausoleums, the tiny honeybees inside the victims of pesticide poisoning. The state Department of Food and Agriculture says the deaths cost beekeepers about $3 million annually. Almond and alfalfa growers alone lose $12 million annually because bees that are needed to cross-pollinate their crops are dying off.

The deaths have increased since the 1940s, when growers began using more toxic pesticides to kill off harmful insects. Most of the chemicals also kill the bees brought in to pollinate the crops and trees.

"There's a natural conflict, and I really don't know how we'll ever overcome this," sighed John Allred of Madera, a beekeeper for almost 40 years, who recalls years when half of his hives suffered severe losses due to pesticide poisoning.

Although a nationwide curse, pesticide poisoning hits California hardest. Growers of almonds, alfalfa, apples, apricots, olives, melons, cotton and safflower depend on bees for cross-pollination.

State Department of Food and Agriculture officials insist the problem is being licked. Apiary specialist Len Foote said 1970 was the worst year. About 89,000 of the 521,000 hives in California died off.

By the summer of 1975, he says, losses were down to 31,000 out of 500,000 hives. Each hive contains some 40,000 to 60,000 bees.

But California's two-year drought pushed the death toll back up slightly to 47,000 colonies in 1976, he said. Normally, beekeepers move their hives to the wilderness during the offseason to feed on the nectar of wildflowers. But little rain over the past two years meant few wildflowers, so the hives were left in irrigated, agricultural areas where pesticide poisoning was likely. "They had nowhere else to go," said Foote.

Bees most often are poisoned when they are pollinating one field while spraying is being done in an adjacent field. Bees, attracted to the new blossoms, are oblivious to the poison.

State law requires that growers notify beekeepers within a mile of their fields before they spray. But often the keepers can't move their hives quickly enough or must leave them in place of contracts with almond growers. One new type of pesticide is particularly hazardous because bees mistake its tiny granules for pollen and carry them back to the hives — contaminating thousands of bees.

Harvey Caine, a senior at the University of California at Santa Cruz, estimated after three years of research that damage to bees and hives exceeds $20 million annually across the country.

The number of hives has dropped by 20 percent from 1964 to 1974, Caine says. He attributes that in part to the banning of DDT, a pesticide which was harmless to bees, because it forced the use of new types of chemicals that killed bees.

Dairymen hit milk price cut

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Dairy owners have gone to court in an effort to reverse a state decision that reduced the price they get for milk by one cent a half-gallon. They say it will cost them a total of $14 million a year. The action filed Wednesday by the League of California Milk Producers and farmer Herbert Neely of Marysville charges that the state failed to follow procedures required by law.

State Food and Agriculture Director Richard Rominger ordered the price cut effective Feb. 12, saying that it was justified by lower feed costs. It was the first such cut in 24 years.

The one-cent reduction makes the farm price 44 cents per half gallon. The suit contends a hearing held by Rominger on Dec. 13 occurred while the old milk law was in effect. It expired Jan. 1 and was replaced by a different statute.

The suit says Rominger and the department "acted beyond their statutory authority, arbitrarily, capriciously" in holding the hearing before the new law was effective.

Divorce may help career

NEW YORK (AP) — In a major shift of values, big business is removing divorce as an impediment to executive advancement, and has even begun viewing it as a prized asset in ascending the corporate pyramid.

The shift is marked. In the 1960s, the efforts of some executives to win the top job were permanently derailed because of divorce. Some who already had won the job were forced to resign after marital splits.

"If a top qualifier became divorced it was considered proof he could not manage his personal affairs and therefore couldn't be expected to manage corporate matters," is the explanation of one authority.

Now, explains Eugene Jennings, a confidential adviser to chief executives of giant corporations, and author of that viewpoint, the situation has almost become reversed, or is tending in that direction.

"The divorced and single person is prized because he or she is capable of giving unrelenting effort at a time when so many executives are forced to give greater priority to their families," said Jennings.

"In many respects," he continued, "corporate life is a single person's world, and the divorced person has already proved by divorce that he or she has chosen the company."

In one large corporation there is even an organization of VOSPs — those who informally and perhaps even facetiously have taken what they call "vows of single people."

Jennings, a management professor at Michigan State University and creator three decades ago of the first computer model to monitor corporate personnel movements, backgrounds the change in this manner:

As recently as the 1960s the corporate executive was viewed as the success model of a whole lifestyle. The system wanted him to be a model of the conservative virtues, including having a stable marriage.

It was a time when corporate life was much less demanding, and marriages were founded on the traditional roles of man and woman as breadwinner and homemaker. The marriage could withstand sacrifices made for the good of the company.

'Panama Connection' and canal treaties

WASHINGTON (AP) — They're calling it "The Panama Connection," a catchy if borrowed title for a tale of dope smuggling that apparently was tolerated and, according to some accounts, may even have been abetted by Panamanian strong man Omar Torrijos.

Popeye Doyle busted the French connection. But politicians, not policemen, are handling the Panama case. At issue, of course, are the treaties to relinquish U.S. control of the Panama Canal.

There is no indication that s single Senate vote has been changed by the story unfolded in two days of secret sessions. But opponents of the canal treaties say they are not about to drop the question of narcotics trafficking allegedly involving Panamanian officials.

They contend that the drug allegations raise questions about the credibility and reliability of the Torrijos regime, with which the United States is contracting in the canal deal.

"The Panama connection with respect to narcotics is not a small item," said Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich. "We're not talking about small amounts of marijuana, we're talking about large amounts of heroin."

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said the Senate Intelligence Committee has reports that include unverified assertions that Omar Torrijos assisted his brother, Moises, who has been indicted for smuggling heroin to New York City.

"However, our investigation has turned up no conclusive evidence that could be used in a court of law," Bayh said.

But the treaties are in the Senate, not in court. The rules of evidence are different, and opponents of ratification argue that there is a compelling circumstantial case against officials of the Torrijos regime.

Griffin said that the treaties would diminish U.S. ability to deal with drug trafficking through Panama by relinquishing police powers and customs jurisdiction in the Canal Zone 30 months after ratification.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, the Democratic leader, said the drug allegations should be put to rest by the Senate's closeddoor debate. He called them remote issues, peripheral to the essential question: "Are these treaties in the best interests of the United States?"

If there was any consensus, it was that Torrijos and his regime are not the most admirable leaders around.

"Torrijos is no angel," said Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., who supports the treaties. "He's a military dictator." Javits said he doesn't doubt that there has been narcotics traffic involving some Panamanian officials. But he also noted that the canal will remain in U.S. control until the year 2000, when "I won't be here, many of the rest of us won't be here and Torrijos won't be there, either, probably."

Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., said Torrijos is no saint, but neither were the leaders of South Vietnam when the United States went to war to support that country.

Behind the rhetoric there is a broader question, and that is whether the United States can or should make its treaties or alliances contingent on the character of a foreign leader or the nature of his regime.

President Carter expects to send the Senate a new Strategic Arms Limitation agreement with the Soviet Union later this year. The administration has sought to isolate the SALT negotiations from the highs and lows of U.S.-Soviet relations on other issues, because the president deems it too important to be sidetracked.

As Sen. Mike Gravel, DAlaska, noted, the Senate is hardly likely to hold secret sessions on the character of Soviet Leader Leonid I. Brezhnev when it considers the SALT treaty.

U.S. aid to South Korea continues, even though the government there is a dictatorship accused of sending agents to bribe American congressmen. The list goes on, for the United States does business all the time with governments Americans do not admire, and makes treaties with adversaries. That is done on the grounds it serves the national interest.

Carter says no to buried cables

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has rejected an ambitious Navy plan to build a vast underground antenna system to communicate with missile-carrying Polaris and Trident submarines, an administration source said today.

As an alternative, the source said, the president favors a scaled-down antenna project that would require only five percent as much buried cable as the Navy had originally proposed.

The source, who asked not to be identified, reported that Project Seafarer, the blueprint scrapped by Carter, has been cut back so sharply that officials now refer to it officially as Project Elf.

Local opposition to the original proposal, which called for burying 2,400 miles of cable in a 4,000 square mile area, was strong in Wisconsin and Michigan. The Navy last December gave up on the original project and recommended construction in Upper Michigan of a relatively small buried antenna grid to cost $250 million to $300 million.

The president rejected Project Seafarer in a letter he wrote last Thursday to Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

Carter instead gave tentative approval, the source said, to a much smaller system in Michigan and Wisconsin that would be linked electronically. At the same time, the informant said, Carter asked Brown to restudy alternate sites for the project.

In a final environmental impact statement last December, the Navy said the Michigan site is superior to any other location because of the conductivity of its underlying rock formations. It specifically rejected as unsuitable two other possible sites at White Sands, N.M., and Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada.

According to the source, the federal government already holds rights-of-way almost sufficient for the alternative Michigan plan. In addition, he said, there would be no future expansion of the grid should it be built.

In writing Brown, Carter was quoted as agreeing the Navy needs the capacity to make ultra low frequency radio transmissions to its submarines, the purpose of the projected system.

At present, the source said, administration officials are consulting about the alternate plan with Congress members and others from the states that could be directly affected. He said Carter will make a decision following these consultations and the completion of the ordered study of possible alternate sites.

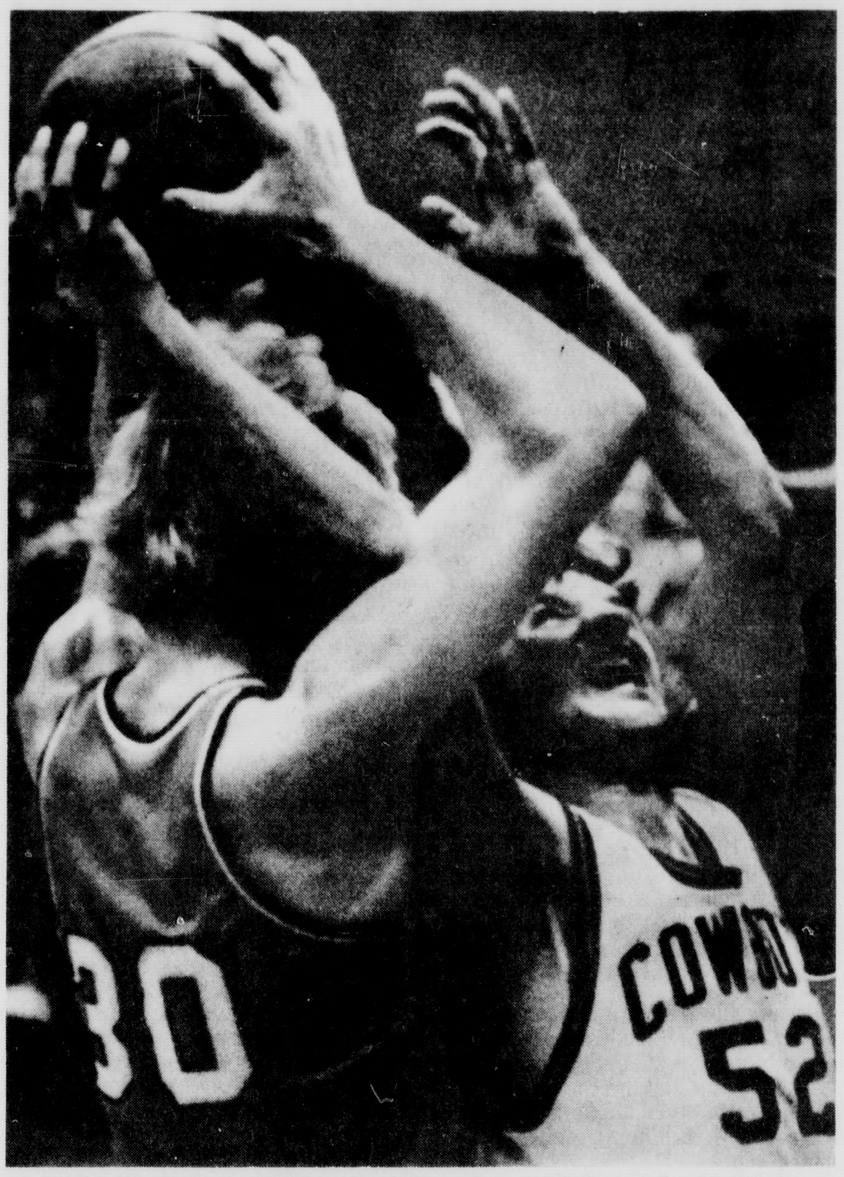
Last chance for Cal cagers



Cal's Chuck Cary (30) grabs rebound over 'Pokes John Bachleda
(TIMES PHOTO BY JOHN RAMOS)

California High has beaten both of the East Bay Athletic League's champions.

Now they're out to fend for themselves.

The Grizzlies, a classic Cinderella team, will dance on its golden slippers to Dublin tonight when it meets new rival Amador Valley in an 8 p.m. contest.

Because Cal beat co - champion Livermore 63-61 Wednesday night in a stunning first - round upset, Amador has picked up the championship point and must lose twice to the Grizzlies to have a return - trip to the North Coast Section tournament Wednesday at Cal-State Hayward blunted.

Cal and Amador have a rivalry that's about a week old now. Not that the teams haven't played each other the past three years, only because Cal never beat Amador before last Friday in a season - ending 67-60 surprise which knocked Amador from sole possession of first place combined with Livermore's win over Monte Vista, which vaulted the Grizzlies right into the playoffs.

Proving rude visitors to a Cowboy squad which paved the way for Cal to even reach the post - season action, the Grizzlies were ahead of the 'Pokes for most of the game Wednesday night before letting the lead slip away late in the fourth quarter.

Livermore reserve forward Ed Dante scored his only two points of the game with 1:40 to play to put Livermore ahead 61-60, but Cal's Mark Kulak came back to tie it with a free throw at 1:28. After missing the second shot, Livermore snared the rebound and stalled the clock down to 15 seconds before calling a time out to set up a final play.

The call backfired when Dante fed 'Poke guard John Farfan a pass over the midcourt line, immediately turning the ball back over to Cal.

The inbounds pass went to Brian Green, who fed guard Daryl Lamb with a pass at the top of the key. He drove, he hooked, and he put the ball through the hoop with five seconds showing to give Cal a miracle win after facing overtime possibilities at best seconds earlier.

Chuck Cary led a gambling Cal offense with 17 points, while Lamb scored 14 and Kulak 11. While unabie to mount a consistent offense against the 'Poke defense, Cal relied on jump shots and fast breaks to apply the kiss of death on the uncharacteristically slow Cowboys, who were unable to get a running game going until it was too late.

Times SPORTS
Dave Weber, Editor

Dick Patterson closed out a brilliant career at Livermore with 17 points, while Farfan, a guard EBAL coaches are in near unanimous agreement on as the best in the league, scored 16 in his final game. Brian Schweiger, a junior who will have another chance for coach John Erceg next year, fouled out of the game after scoring 12 first half points and ending with 13.

Amador jumped out to an early lead against Granada, but the Mats, behind the play of Dan Lambert and a 10-2 string of points, rallied to take a 27-26 halftime lead over the Dons.

The third quarter saw Amador jump back out in front, though, as a stifling press forced the Mats into several turnovers and helped build a lead which never fell under three points the rest of the contest.

Lampert scored 20 points for Granada in a fine season - closing effort. Lambert set a Granada school record with 45 points against Foothill in the final regular season game, in addition to setting an EBAL season scoring mark of 333 points.

No other Matador scored in double figures, but guards Scott Fullmer (eight points) and Wes Karch (six) kept the Mats at a quick pace. Steve Robison scored eight points, while Matt Watson added nine points before fouling out of the game.

Amador, relying on its bench strength to keep the edge, saw Chris Kearns foul out of the game after netting 11 points. However, Rick Howard continued to be the catalyst of the AV offense, leading the Dons with 18 points. Darren Pembroke scored eight points and Paul Campana six. Both were instrumental on defense in the second half, limiting Granada to ten points in the third quarter and 14 in the final stanza.

Ken Noble was able to avoid foul trouble and ended with eight points. The Dons will have to limit the fouls against the Grizzlies, too. They played a big part in their loss t them last Friday.

Should Cal pull off a win tonight, the teams will play again tomorrow at Dublin High, also beginning at 8 p.m.

Bayi ready for AAU indoor meet

NEW YORK (AP) — Filbert Bayi, the world outdoor record holder at 1,500 meters, says he has been pointing toward Friday's 1978 National AAU Indoor Track and Field Championships — and now he appears ready.

The slender Tanzanian, after being beaten in his first nine indoor races this season, finally got a victory last Saturday night at the Examiner Games in San Francisco, barely winning the mile, over Nick Rose of Great Britain. Both runners were timed in 4:00.2.

Bayi was married late last year, then contacted malaria, and his conditioning suffered. "I will have to run myself back into shape and the one race I want to win most is your championship," he said.

He admits he still is not in top condition, and probably won't be until the summer, most likely for the Commonwealth Games at Edmonton, Alberta, in August, when he will meet New Zealand's John Walker, his chief rival and the outdoor world mile record holder.

Bayi has won the AAU title each of the past three years, but he might have a difficult time making it four in a row.

His opposition will include Eamonn Coghlan of Ireland and Wilson Waigwa of Kenya.

Coghlan, who beat Walker twice this year in New Zealand and also campaigned successfully in Australia, has predicted he will break the world indoor record of 3:54.9, set by Dick Buerkle last month. Buerkle is injured and sidelined at least until April.

Mahre skiing champ

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Phil Mahre, the only American who has won this season on the World Cup circuit, turned in the fastest run of the second heat to sweep past teammate Eric Wilson and win the giant slalom Thursday at the U.S. National Alpine Ski Championships.

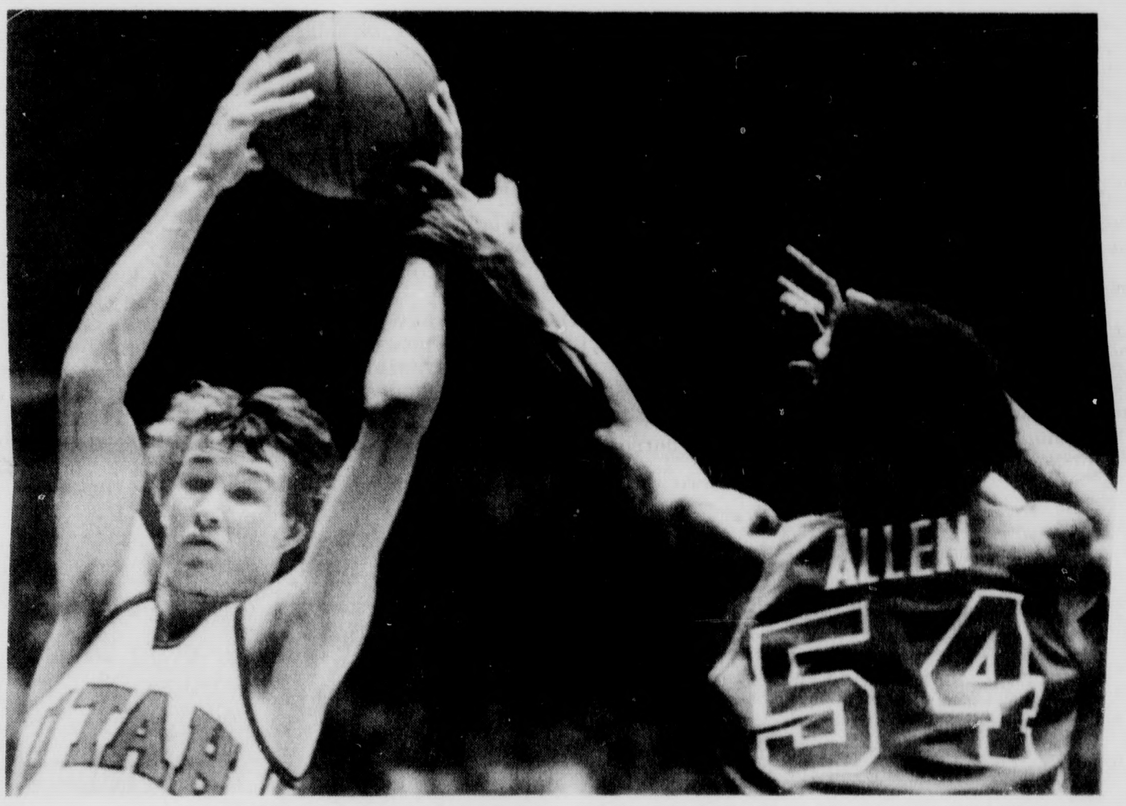
Coming from third after the first heat with the time of 1 minute 16.86 seconds, Mahre, 20, of White Pass, Wash., clocked 1:24.00 over a tougher second course to win in 2:40.86. Wilson, 20, of Montpelier, Vt., a former downhiller who turned to the giant slalom this season, had heats of 1:16.16 and 1:24.78 for 2:40.94.

Bill Taylor of Orchid Park, N.Y., whose mother is the program director of the White Face Alpine Traning Center, was third in 2:42.15, followed by Peter Dodge of St. Johnsbury, Vt., 2:44.45, and Greg Jones of Tahoe City, Calif., at 2:44.48.

The race was marred by the injury in the first run of Pete Patterson, a 21-year-old U.S. Ski Team racer from Sun Valley, Idaho, who broke his left leg in a fall.

Patterson, who won a bronze medal in the combined at the World Alpine Championships in West Germany earlier this month, fractured the femur bone, doctors at Lake Placid Hospital said. They said his leg would be in traction for 6-8 weeks. A pin was inserted into the bone to keep it from drifting apart and Patterson will remain at Lake Placid Hospital for a week to 10 days.

Dr. Richard E. Steadman, the U.S. Ski Team physician, will arrive here from Denver this weekend to examine Patterson.



Going for the ball

New Mexico's Jimmy Allen (54) grabs Utah's Jeff Judkins by the wrist in a tussle over a rebound in last night's Western Athletic Conference basketball game. Utah stunned the fifth-ranked New Mexico squad, 95-92 in one of the seasons' biggers upsets.

Finley's attorney disputes ruling on Kuhn suit

CHICAGO — Charles O. Finley's attorney said Thursday that a judge who threw out the Oakland A's owner's suit against baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn should have considered the bad relations between the two men.

Neil Papiano also argued that Finley did not receive a fair hearing on his proposed sale of three star players on June 15, 1976. Kuhn's decision to bar the sales three days later prompted Finley's $3.5 million suit.

U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr ruled against Finley last March 17, and oral arguments on Finley's appeal to the U.S. 7th Circuit Court of Appeals were heard Thursday.

Papiano said a decision might be announced in three or four months. The three judges who took the case under advisement were not available for comment.

McGarr had ruled that the main issue was whether major league baseball rules gave Kuhn the right to block deals that would have sent Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to Boston for $1 million apiece and Vida Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million. McGarr said Kuhn had that right under a rule that allows him to act in "the best interests" of baseball.

Kuhn said he disallowed the sales because they would upset competitive balance in the American League and would open the door "wide to buying of success by the more affluent clubs."

Finley said he made the deals because the three players had planned to become free agents at the end of the 1976 season and he could use the money to buy other free agents.

Although the key point in McGarr's decision was that Kuhn had broad powers to act under the "best interests" clause, Papiano barely touched on it Thursday.

USF clinches tie with 87-81 win over Gaels

ST. MARY'S COLLEGE — Bill Cartwright was supposed to eat Norm Kelly for lunch while the University of San Francisco snacked on the St. Mary's Gaels in last night's West Coast Athletic Conference basketball game.

He didn't and they didn't.

Sure, the Dons won, 87-81, and clinched a share of their second straight WCAC title, going into Saturday afternoon's home game with co-leader Nevada/Reno, a winner over Santa Clara last night at the bottom of the Bay.

But, Cartwright scored his 24 points as often from the outside as he did from the inside and the capacity crowd of 3500 in George McKeon Pavilion was spared a repeat of the first Don-Gael clash when Kelly, the 6-9 transfer from USC cringed under an assortment of Cartwright slams and jams that comprised his 17-for-18 shooting night.

He was six-for-10 last night, canning 12 free throws for the remainder of his points. Kelly thought Cartwright neededn't have scored even that many.

"Norman wasn't intimidated at all," said Gael coach Frank LaPorte, and he was right.

Kelly, playing with a taped right thumb and a hell of a self-psyche job, said he tried to be more physical with Cartwright, who outweighs him a mear 55 pounds, and fronted him more often.

With St. Mary's going ahead by as many as four in the first half, Cartwright had just eight points at intermission. But, after the break, the Dons went to their seven-footer with increasing regularity to build a big lead and fight off a St. Mary's threat that carried into the final minute.

"They figured they'd have to go to him to get the lead. They told him to take it to the hoop and, unfortunately for us, he did," said Kelly, nontheless pleased with his improvement.

Though USF partisans cried "homer" throughout, Kelly felt he got the short ednd end of the stick when dealing with Cartwright.

"The refs (Ronald Labetich and Richard Schromm) let him push me around out there — I couldn't believe it," said Kelly.

The Gaels trailed, 75-63, with just barely five minutes to play when they inexplicably granted the wishes of underdog fans everywhere, rattling off a 16-4 spurt that was bouyed by Rick Bernard's outside touch and punctuated by a pair of slammers by Kelly.

That brought the score to 81-79 with :39 to play, but St. Mary's now needed the ball more than USF needed to shoot and the Gaels had to take three fouls, Chubby Cox each time making two free throws. And it was good for Chubby that he did.

"Chubby used very poor judgement three times (during St. Mary's rally)," said Don coach Bob Gaillard. But, in the end, good shooting outweighed poor judgement.

Sweeney Raider special team coach

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Raiders patched their depleted coaching staff Thursday naming former California head Ray Willsey and Fresno State coach Jim Sweeney to assistant posts.

Raiders' spokesman Andy Olson said the hirings completed the National Football League team's 1978 coaching staff.

Sweeney, 48, was named the Pacific Coast Athletic Association's coach of the year after winning the league championship with a 9-2 record this past season, according to Tom Kane, Fresno State sports information director. Sweeney has been at Fresno two years, posting a 5-6 record his first season. Before that, he was head coach at Washington State for eight years and coached at Montana State for eight years.

Kane said spring football practice at Fresno State had been postponed from March until April 1.

He said the school hoped to name a new head coach by March 10.

Sweeney is married and has eight children.

Jones overcomes wind to grab Classic lead

LAUDERHILL, Fla, (AP) — Grier Jones, holing a 184-yard five-iron for an eagle, shot a 5 - under - par 67 Thursday to take a 2-stroke lead in the opening round of the $225,000 Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic which was played in chilly and windy weather.

In addition to this 2 on the 434-yard par 4 No. 5, the 31 - year - old Grier fired six birdies but had three bogeys over the 7,127-yard, par 72 Inverrary Country Club Course which played longer in the unusual South Florida weather.

Jones, a 10-year tour veteran, held a 2-stroke lead over a group of eight including Fuzzy Zoeller, Bob Shearer, Danny Edwards, Andy Bean, Kermit Zarley, Hale Irwin, Gibby Gilbert and Steve Melnyk, all of whom carded 69s.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus shot a 2 - under - par 70 to join a group that included Barry Jaeckel, Lyn Lott, Dave Eichelberger, Don January, Pat McGowan, Jerry Pate, Bob Gilder, Tom Jenkins, Gary Wintz and Tim Simpson. Four strokes behind Jones, at 1 - under - par 71, were Keith Fergus, Bruce Devlin, Wayne Levi, Howard Twitty and Phil Hancock.

U.S. Open winner Hubert Green suffered from a case of the flu and withdrew before the round.

Paterno admits a credibility gap exists with gird powers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Penn State Coach Joe Paterno says there is a credibility gap in college football, and the nation's major powers must convince other schools they have the sport's best interests in mind rather than selfish motives.

"We're a little suspect right now and that bothers me," Paterno said Thursday during the National Collegiate Athletic Association's College Football '78 preview. "We've got to convince people we mean well for all college football, not just 75- 80 schools."

Paterno referred to those NCAA members who have voted in the same division with the so-called "super powers" in the past but whose programs are conducted on a much less expensive scale and on a different level of competition.

Penn State and the other bigtime schools are awaiting midMarch, when last year's 144 Division I members must declare to enter either Division I-A or I-AA as created at last month's NCAA convention.

Originally, it was felt that the top 75-80 football schools would be in I-A and the others in IAA. But some of the smaller Division I conferences have made it known they will go I-A, along with the Notre Dames, Alabamas, Penn States, etc.

"Right now, we have some sort of restructuring," Paterno said. "But the College Football Association feels very strongly that we need a better vehicle than 135-140 schools voting what's best for the 75-80 of our caliber."

Most of the major conferences and independents belong to the CFA, which has declared its intention to work within the framework of the NCAA, despite past hints of a possible large-scale pullout.

"There is a fear more than anything that if they let us get control of the Division I football, they won't be able to get it back," Paterno said. "Maybe they should give us an opportunity to prove our good faith.

"Everybody is afraid that those 75-80 schools will raise the grants and coaching staff limitations out of sight. I don't think they believe us when we say we want to make the game better — eliminate abuses, raise academic standards, things like that.

"But I think we can sit down and take a look at all the rules and regulations and come away with better rules to regulate our programs.

NCAA enforcement policy under attack

WASHINGTON — Thirty years ago, the National Collegiate Athletic Association adopted a "sanity code" in an effort to regulate the post World War II sports explosion. Now, the NCAA enforcement program has come under Congressional attack.

The NCAA membership, at its 1948 convention, created a compliance committee which was a forerunner to its present Committee on Infractions. The action stemmed from concern over professional gambling on college games, new and different emphasis on financial aids, expanded air transportation which encouraged intersectional scheduling and transcontinental recruiting and the rapid increase in post-season football games.

"Athletic competition had become national in scope rather than local," Arthur Reynolds, dean of the graduate school at the Unversity of North Colorado, told last month's NCAA convention in Atlanta. "Traditional agreements and loosely written regulations which had controlled local rivalries and conference competition in the past were no longer sufficient."

Reynolds, chairman of the five-member NCAA enforcement committee, said the program expanded rapidly but "has not been devoid of agonizing birth pains nor halting transitional stages."

Among the problems, which Reynolds alluded to later, were the many lawsuits as a result of the enforcement program and the current probe by the House investigations subcommittee which will begin public hearings Monday.

After the 1954 convention, the policy-making NCAA Council appointed the first Committee on Infractions and charged "it to investigate alleged violations of NCAA rules, determine if violations had occurred, and propose penalties to be imposed on the involved institution."

At the same time, the association employed an assistant to the executive director whose duties were to include work in the field of enforcement, serving as an arm of the committee to conduct investigations.

Prior to 1973, the NCAA Council automatically received the committee's findings of violations and permitted an appearance by the institution which allegedly had violated NCAA rules. The council then made final the findings of violations, if any, and imposed an appropriate penalty.

Several amendments were adopted at the 1973 convention to change the enforcement procedures because the membeship believed that the initial role of the committee on infractions in investigating, prosecuting and fact-finding was not fair.

The new procedures provided that the staff serve as the investigative arm and the administrative prosecutor of infractions cases. They also said the committee would provide general supervision over policies and procedures and shall, following an approriate appearance by the involved institution, be the initial fact-finder and imposer of penalties. The committee's finding and penalty can be appealed to the Council.

"Beginning at the 1973 annual convention," Reynolds said, "the membership demonstrated its desire to fully enforce NCAA rules and regulations by authorizing a major expansion in the investigative staff and by encouraging the imposition of penalties on the individual coaches, student-athletes and representatives of athletic interests who have violated NCAA rules and regulations.

"When the NCAA expanded its investigative staff and began to penalize guilty coaches, student-athletic and athletic representatives, it was inevitable that some of those individuals would employ attorneys and inaugurate a legal confrontation against the NCAA enforcement machinery," he said.

Nevertheless, Reynolds said: "In spite of verbal and legal attacks, the enforcement program over the past 30 years has been and is today dynamic and changing to protect the needs and interests of the association's membership. New rules are adopted, violations of old and new rules occur, new and different issues arise, enlarged meaning of procedural rights are promulgated, more and complex infractions cases are processed, and, therefore, the committee on infractions modifies its day-to-day operating procedure to meet the changing conditions."

A review of the past 30 years, he said, "fails to disclose a single instance in which the membership favored weakening the enforcement program; rather the membership has voted continuously to strengthen every phase of it, including ample financial support and adequate staff to assure that law and order within college athletics may prevail."

Cowgirl jv cagers finish fine season

Livermore High School's junior varsity girls' basketball team completed an outstanding season with a 47-30 victory over visiting Foothill last night in the 'Poke gym.

The victory gives Livermore a 12-2 record in the final East Bay Athletic League standings.

The 'Pokes used their second strong quite a bit in the game and some of the players came away with their best efforts of the season.

Carolyn Miller led the winners with 12 points and Mary Hardiman added 11 markers. Paris Althouse, a reserves player, added eight points and was aggressive on the 'boards.

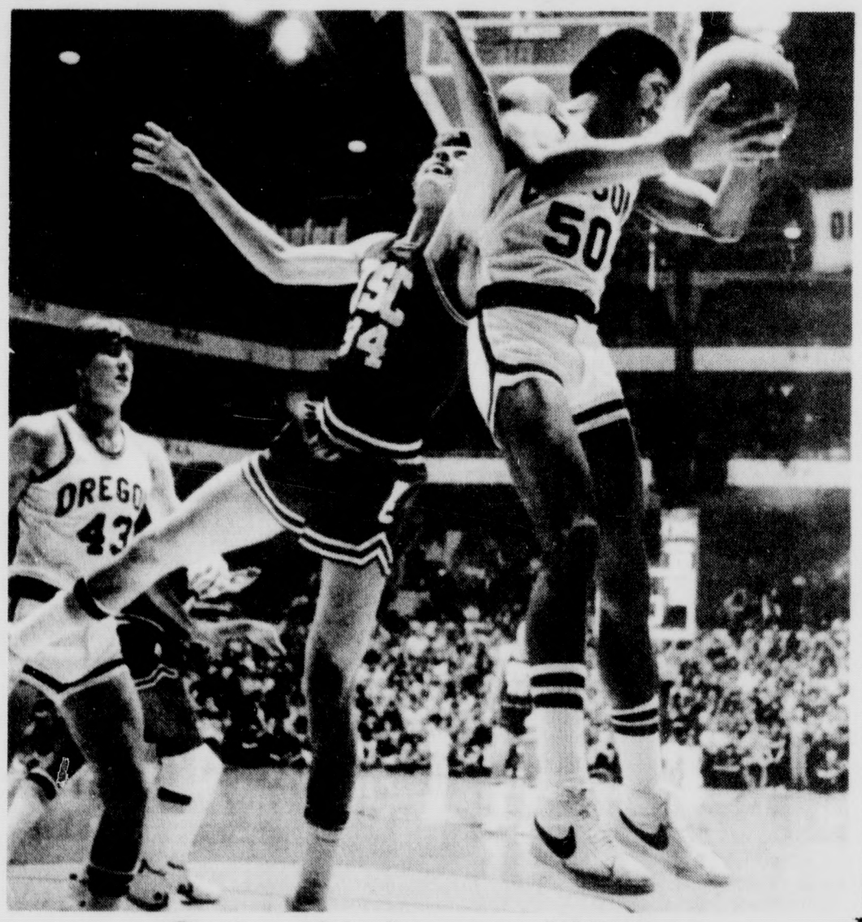
Debbie Alviso, another reserve, was a tower of strength rebounding for the winners. She collected 12 rebounds.

Betsy Hickman, a regular, scored four points on two field goals and played a fine all-around contest.

Both teams were tied 10-10 at the first quarter break but Livermore held the Falcons to five points in the second quarter while scoring 11 of its own and took a 21-15 advantage at the halftime break.

The Cowgirls broke the game wide open in the final quarter, scoring 20 markers while the Falcons tallied 11.

Most of the 'Pokes' scoring in the final half came from their reserves as the regulars took an early leave from the contest.



Going higher and higher

Oregon's Kevin Small grabs a rebound high over the head of USC's Paul Henderson (34) in a Pacific-Eight Conference basketball contest last night. USC entered the game in third place in the Pacific-Eight conference.

Austin sparks NCS over North Carolina

RALEIGH, N.C. — Clyde Austin scored 14 points, including a driving lay-up with 20 seconds left, to boost North Carolina State past eighth-ranked North Carolina 72-67 in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball Thursday night.

Austin's basket gave the Wolfpack a 68-67 lead. North Carolina was forced to foul when it lost the ball, and Kenny Matthews and Tiny Pinder each hit on 1 - and - 1 opportunities, sealing the victory.

The injury-riddled Tar Heels, playing without regulars Phil Ford, Mike O'Koren and Rich Yonakor, dropped into a tie with Duke for first place in the ACC. The two teams, both with 8-3 conference records, meet Saturday.

Don King wants Spinks-Norton bout

NEW YORK (AP) — Promoter Don King has offered new heavyweight champion Leon Spinks $2 million to defend his title against Ken Norton in May or June, a spokesman for King said Thursday.

The spokesman said King has been negotiating with Norton for the bout. King said Spinks had agreed, along with dethroned champion Muhammad Ali, that the winner of their fight would sign to defend against Norton by July 7 or be stripped of the title by the World Boxing Council.

Bob Arum, a promotional rival of King, denied the night Spinks beat Ali that Spinks had agreed to anything. Spinks is leaving all out-of-the-ring fighting to Arum and his attorney.

Arum has promotional rights to Spinks' next three fights and an option for three more after that.

Cal-State track team opens season

Cal-State Hayward's track team opens the 1978 season with a four-way meet at San Jose State tomorrow.

The Pioneers, who won the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division II championship last season, will compete with Stanford, Stanislaus and the powerful host Spartans.

Cal-State Hayward' coached this season by Don Chu, has a host of stars returning and should defend its Far Western Conference championship again.

Leading the way for the Pioneers is three-time NCAA Division II high jump champion Dave Haber, who was ranked 10th in the United States last season.

Haber, who has a best of 7-foot-4, could go 7-foot-5 or 7-foot-6 this year, according to Chu.

The Pioneer standout finished fourth at the recent Examiner Indoor Games with a 6-foot-10 effort.

Other Cal-State Hayward standouts are Marvin Wamble, who finished second in the NCAA last year and is the defending FWC long jump champion.

Wamble had a best of 25-3¼ last year and could approach the 26-foot mark this year. He has made great improvement since his high school days at El Cerrito High School where he could only go 19-feet.

Junior pole vaulter Bob Olson is another star. He has a best of 16-foot-4 and could go even higher this year. Mark Sawyer in the hammer throw has a best effort of foot-6. He was second in the NCAA Division II meet last year.

The Pioneers are counting on a host of newcomers to bolster their program.

Vernon Sallas, who was fifth in the 880-yard run in the high school state meet as a San Leandro senior last year, should add great help to the Cal-State middle distance and mile-relay teams.

Brian Conley, a freshman from Burbank High School in Sacramento' has already done 14.3 in the high hurdles and captured the Examiner Games division 60-yard highs in 7.4 last week.

Billy Ward, a transfer from Merritt College, is a standout quarter miler and has run a 48.0 in that event.

The Pioneers are also respectable in the sprints and strong overall in the weight events. They also have several other standout hurdlers besides Conley.

But San Jose State figures to dominate the meet tomorrow.

The Spartans are led by high hurdler Dedy Cooper and triple jumper-high jumper Ron Livers.

Cooper, a junior, won the NCAA championship in 1976 and could have earned a possible berth on the United States Olympic team if it had not been for a recurring injury which has been corrected.

Dedy, who led Harry Ells of Richmond to the state high school championship in 1975, finished the indoor season undefeated, and ran the fastest 60-meter time in the country. He ended the indoor year with a fine 7-0 mark.

Livers has gone 7-foot-4 in the high jump and 56-4¾ in the triple jump. Last year Livermore was ranked third in the world and first in the United States in the triple jump. His 56-4¾ leap was the best in the country last season.

Livers won the NCAA, placed third in the National Amateur Athletic Union meet and took the triple jump in the World University Games.

The Spartans also have a host of other fine athletes.

Shot putter Bob Feuerbach, the younger brother of former world record holder Al, has thrown the round ball 61-feet-8. Craig Woespse, a 17-foot-7 pole vaulter and Frank De Jak a 248-foot javelin thrower, are other fine quality athlets for San Jose State.mgThe key to San Jose State's success could be the running of sprinter-440 man Ronald Whitaker.

Whitaker, who led Wilson High School of San Francisco to the state prep crown in 1973, won the Pacific Coast Athletic Association championship in the 100 and 220 in 1976.

He layed off track last season but is returning this year and could be a outstanding 440 runner. He ran 47.0 in high school at the state meet.

Other top Spartan athletes are hurdler Mike Kirtman, miler Stan Ross and weightman Bob Germerson.

Kirtman was a teammate of Whitaker's at Wilson and is also a wide receiver on the Spartan football team.

Ross prepped at Serra High School in San Mateo and ran a 4:06.0 as a senior last season.

Germerson has thrown the shot put 59-feet and the discus 175 feet.

All-American footballer James Lofton leads Stanford's team. He has leaped consistently over 26 feet in the long jump and was the world leader for awhile in 1977.

Shot putter Terry Albritton is also a standout.

Former San Ramon High School star Roy Kissin has done 8:56.0 in the two-mile and freshman Tom O'Neil is a standout marathon runner.

Martinez holds distance race

The Northern California Seniors Track Club is sponsoring its 10th annual Martinez to Port Costa Brickyard Run Saturday.

The 8.4-mile race will start at the entrance of Martinez Municipal Park and continue over winding roads up to Port Costa.

The race is open to any registered AAU athlete with a current card, according to director Luke Sekulich.

All persons under 18-years-old must be accompanied by a parent or authorized adult to the sign-up.

Registration is $2 per entry and $4 per family.

Divisions will be broken down by age groups. They are 14-29, 30-39, 40-45, 46-50, 51-59, and 60 and over.

Awards will be presented to the oldest and youngest male and female plus the fastest father and son, mother and son, father and daughter, mother and daughter, and husband and wife.

The first 200 finishers will receive special patches. Additional awards will be given to Martinez runners.

The course record of 40 minutes was set in 1974 by former De La Salle harrier Rich Kimball, now a police officer in the San Jose area.

Antique cars should bring throng to fair

AUTOMOTIVE

One man comes all the way from Nebraska each year, others from up and down the state, but most from throughout the Greater San Francisco Bay Area.

What could the event be that would bring thousands of people to Pleasanton early on a February morn?

Antique cars.

Is there an antique buff so rare as the one who would travel hundreds of miles to swap, sell or buy antique auto parts?

Last February the antique auto swap meet at the Pleasanton Fairgrounds drew the largest single day attendance of any event held at that spacious expanse.

Organized and hosted by the Bay Area Horseless Carriage Club, the event is scheduled this Sunday in the parking lot area off of Bernal Avenue. Gates will open at 6 a.m.

Sellers will be charged $5 per space, payable at the gate according to Doug King of the club's board of directors.

The vendor spaces go quickly.

King said 600 spaces were sold in 1½ hours last year. Event organizers were able to accomodate 150 more before they ran out of room.

The meet is essentially an old car parts swap meet.

Flea market "action" heats-up by 10 a.m. and usually lasts until at least 3 or 4 p.m. There'll be cars from as recently as the 1960s all the way back to the early 1900s. Some will come just to exhibit their vehicle in the hope a deal can be made.

Most of the crowd (10,000 are expected if the weather holds) will come to browse and "oohh" and "aahh." No admission is charged for the latter!

King says there'll be three catering trucks on the grounds to provide sandwiches and soft drinks.

While the Sunday swap meet is one of the non-Fair highlights of the year, a busy March is forthcoming at the Fairgrounds.

On March 4 and 5, for example, the Alameda County 4-H is hosting a poultry show. If chickens and ducks are not your favorites, the 4-H group will also be having a dog show on Sunday the 5th.

A Fiat of America autocross is also slated Sunday.

Bay Area Pollution Conrol has board meetings scheduled March 7, 14, and 21.

Hook Um Up Trailer Club will host a meeting March 10-12.

The Pleasanton Junior Women's Club has its annual Monte Carlo Night, open to the public, slated in the Exhibit Hall from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday, March 11.

Other meetings, dances, and autocrosses scheduled include:

Mercedes Benz Club autocrosss, March 11; Sports Car Club of America autocross, March 12; Sunset Sams trailer meet, March 13-15; Family Motor Coach Association, March 17-19; Night Talkers CB Club break-dance, March 18; Livermore Rotary Club crab feed, March 18; Bantam Club show, March 18; Continental Sports Car Club autocross, March 19; St Augustine's School picnic, March 22; Northern California Corvettes autocross, March 25; Sheriffs Department graduation, March 29; Allied Van Lines drivers' meeting, March 31.

At Olds, it's by hand

Lansing, Mich. — In the highly-automated industry of building cars, Oldsmobile continues to do special paint striping by hand.

Automated equipment is available and many car compainies use decals, but Oldsmobile feels the hand operation produces better results.

John P. McDermott, Oldsmobile's paint plant superintendent, concurs.

"I think Oldsmobile owners like the thought that the striping is done by people rather than machines. Paint striping and other special paint schemes are becoming more and more important to distinguish one car from another and add that personal touch," he explained.

In the past few years, and most markedly during the 1977 model year, McDermott has watched the decorative paint striping increase from 20 percent of the model run to 70 percent.

Decorative painting, including the paint striping, two-toning and 442 appearance package, is done at the division's home plant in Lansing.

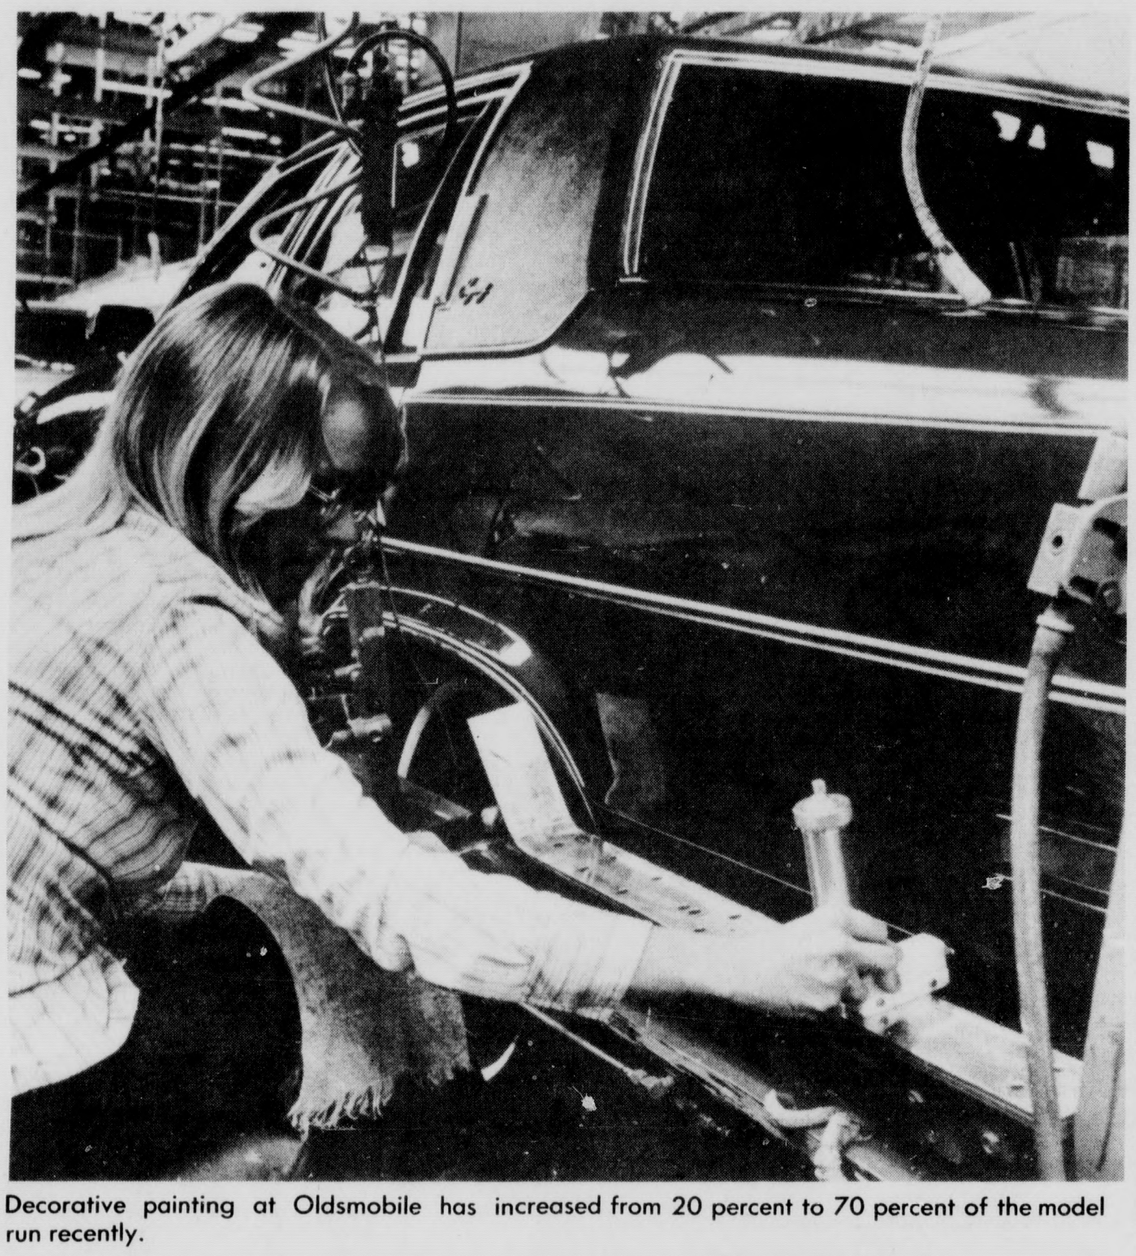
Oldsmobile became the first U.S. automobile producer to install computer-controlled automatic paint spray equipment. The computer is programmed with body style and color and the equipment automatically sprays the right color and amount of paint.

McDermott is quick to point out that the paint plant did not lose employes with the installation of the computerized equipment.

"About the time we installed the automated spray equipment we were experiencing an increase in front end panel production. Our employes were relocated in the new production areas."

Besides supplying painted front end sheet metal, the paint plant bids on special Oldsmobile work.

Last May when Oldsmobile supplied the Indianapolis pace car, the paint plant bid successfully against outside suppliers for the job and painted the 2,400 pace car replicas sold to the public.



Decorative painting at Oldsmobile has increased from 20 percent to 70 percent of the model run recently.

Another special paint program involves fleet cars. A fleet customer who orders 25 or more cars can also order a special paint scheme. McDermott remembers a major credit card company fleet order of Cutlasses that were painted bright orange with blue stripes.

Two sides of pollution, say dealers

SAN FRANCISCO — As the state Air Resources Board was announcing it would increase its already tough anti-pollution laws for automobiles, the head of the National Automobile Dealers Association was calling for a three-year moratorium on federal pollution and safety standards.

"How much cleaner does the air have to be?," asked Robert P. Mallon, who joined about 3,000 colleagues here Tuesday for the group's 61st annual convention. He said he'd ask President Carter to immediately halt all new federal government auto regulations so that past and future rules can be reviewed.

But the California board, saying the federal government's regulations are too lax, announced Tuesday it would further control tailpipe pollution on 1980 model cars with an additional test.

"What we approved was a requirement to control oxides of nitrogen during highway driving conditions, rather than slow-speed driving," said ARB spokesman Fred Baumgartner. Until now, the state board tested cars at an average 20 mph, not the 53 mph Southern Californians average in off-peak hours.

Baumgartner said the new requirements won't affect fuel economy, significantly add to the price of cars, or require new pollution control devices.

A way to fingerprint cars

Identicar codes are engraved in windshields.

Natick, Ma — A unique automobile identification system, pioneered in Australia and proved effective in deterring auto theft on three continents, is now available for the first time in California.

The system is called Identicar. It provides for the permanent identification of any vehicle by engraving a computer-selected code into evey piece of glass. Because of the physical properties of auto glass, the code cannot be altered or removed without total glass replacement at an average cost of $700 to $1,000. Thus because the thief knows he cannot resell the vehicle, he will look for another car to steal when he sees the Identicar decal and code.

Identicar is of special interest to California motorists because of the high incidence of auto theft in their state. According to a recent national magazine article, "California ranks first among all states in pro and amateur thefts, accounting for more than 135,000 of the more than 1,000,000 vehicles stolen annually in the United States."

Identicar was successfully introduced last year in Maine and Massachusetts, and it is now being make available through selected glass replacement dealers in California. It will be introduced nationally at the National Glass Dealers Association annual convention in San Diego March 7-11.

The Identicar code consists of a series of small (⅜-inch-high) letters, and each vehicle is assigned its own unique mark. All codes, together with other pertinent information such as vehicle dpscription, registration number and owner's name, are maintained in a national registry, and this information is available to law enforcement agencies on a 24-hour basis. Thus in addition to deterring theft, the code facilitates the recovery and identification process in the event the vehicle is stolen.

Datsun's new plant

Carson, Ca. — Construction has begun on a new engineering and service center at the headquarters of Nissan U.S.A., distributor of Datsun cars and trucks in the United States.

The two-story, 128,000-square-foot building will contain engineering laboratories, a technical training center and the service center. Offices include the warranty and customer service departments.

"The new facilities will allow us to consolidate offices and laboratories currently scattered throughout the Carson area and to acomodate the increasing headquarters staff necessitated by the success of Datsun sales in the United States," said Hiroshi Majima, president of Nissan U.S.A.

The building was planned and designed by William L. Pereira Associates of Los Angeles. Construction is being managed by Kajima International of Los Angeles.

Try, Try Again

Most people change occupations at least once in their working lives, The Conference Board notes. In fact, between 1965 and 1970 alone, almost one-third of the work force switched fields or job categories. The desire for increased earnings, better working conditions or more interesting work and the lack of opportunity in a particular field are key reasons for the change. Due to less-specialized skills and lower pay, younger workers are the most mobile. Two out of three persons switching occupations are under 35.

THE BEST WAY TO BRING THE GREEN BACK TO YOUR LAWN "Overseed"

...and use a quick-sprouting grass seed from Ferry-Morse.

If your lawn has dried up from months of drought, rain alone won't bring it back. You can bring the green back fast by overseeding with one of Ferry-Morse's quick-sprouting lawn seed mixes specially formulated for this area—to match climate and soil conditions. Comes up fast and requires only a minimum of water for a lush green carpet.

You know you're seeding right with Ferry-Morse, a leading name in grass and garden seed for over a century.

YOUTILITY.

THE 1978 TOYOTA SR-5 LONG BED SPORT TRUCK. NO MATTER WHAT YOU USE A TRUCK FOR, YOU CAN'T BUY A BETTER COMBINATION OF POWER, RELIABILITY, ECONOMY, GOOD LOOKS AND TOYOTA TOUGHNESS.

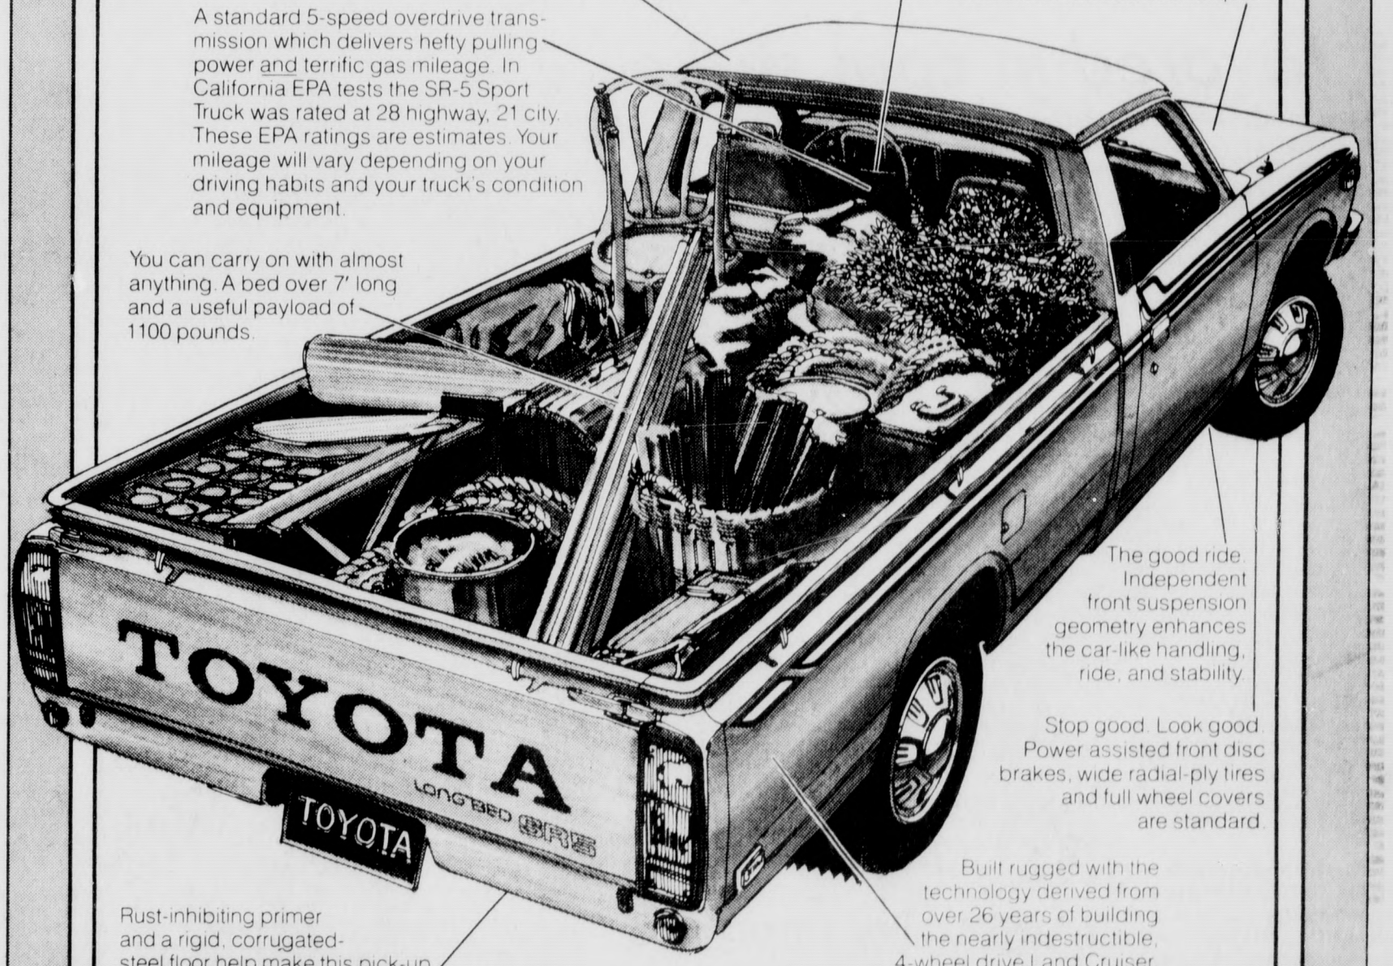
In this cab, you're king. Hi-back bucket seats, wall-to-wall plush carpeting, AM/FM radio, center console and tinted glass, all standard.

A fully transistorized ignition helps make for sure, dependable starting in any weather.

A rugged 2.2 liter, overhead cam power plant. The biggest standard engine displacement in its class, with loads of torque.

A standard 5-speed overdrive transmission which delivers hefty pulling power and terrific gas mileage. In California EPA tests the SR-5 Sport Truck was rated at 28 highway, 21 city. These EPA ratings are estimates. Your mileage will vary depending on your driving habits and your truck's condition and equipment.

You can carry on with almost anything. A bed over 7' long and a useful payload of 1100 pounds.



The good ride. Independent front suspension geometry enhances the car-like handling, ride, and stability.

Stop good. Look good. Power assisted front disc brakes, wide radial-ply tires and full wheel covers are standard.

Built rugged with the technology derived from over 26 years of building the nearly indestructible, 4-wheel drive Land Cruiser.

Rust-inhibiting primer and a rigid, corrugated-steel floor help make this pick-up bed tough. Toyota tough. Another reason why we say, "If you can find a better built truck than a Toyota...buy it."

The 1978 Toyota SR-5 Long Bed Sport Truck. Just one of 6 Toyota Trucks. You'll probably find your reason for truckin' in a Toyota.

Howard J. Ruff of Alamo is shown lecturing a group at the Disneyland Hotel in Anaheim on Thursday. Alamo publisher says economic collapse ahead

ANAHEIM (AP) — People who fear imminent economic collapse and panic in the streets gathered this week at the Disneyland Hotel for advice from a triple-threat financial seer, nutritionist and weatherman.

Famine and rioting seemed remote here, a monorail ride away from "The Happiest Place on Earth," but an estimated 1,500 persons paid $75 apiece to hear Howard J. Ruff discuss "America at the Brink" and inspect food dehydrators, water purifiers and other survival gear.

Ruff, who publishes a semi-monthly newsletter called "The Ruff Times," believes the United States has "a 70 percent chance of sliding into something for which the 1974 recession was only a dress rehearsal." He tells his followers to get out of big cities, stockpile food and be ready to take care of themselves when the crash comes.

"The cities will go bankrupt and there will be welfare and food riots," Ruff has told subscribers. "Neighborhoods adjacent to the ghetto may be in real danger, especially after fires drive the blacks out of the tenements."

Ruff, a 47-year-old father of eight, has many fears about the future. His climatological studies have convinced him that weather is getting worse. He feels "the sexual revolution is hurting our survival abilities" and believes runaway inflation and a temporary financial convulsion are inevitable because of irresponsible government spending.

Ruff had a speed reading franchise in Northern California and spent several years in the food supplement business before becoming an economic advisor. Prior to that he was a stockbroker and professional singer, appearing with the Air Force's Singing Sergeants. His newsletter does not offer stock market advice and Ruff therefore need not comply with stiff licensing requirements imposed on other financial advisors by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

"The Ruff Times" was launched in 1975 after Ruff wrote "Famine and Survival in America," a book which, among others things, "shows how to eat well through the depression." The newsletter, published in Alamo, Calif., now has more than 32,000 subscribers, Ruff says.

Most of those attending the national convention were subscribers and many seemed to share Ruff's fear of panic in the streets.

"We're in a situation where those things are possible and forewarned is forearmed," said T. Malcom Morey, a computer programmer from Sacramento. "I'm one who believes civilized man isn't all that civilized."

For others who fear the worst, the convention featured booths displaying such items as the "Survival Pack," an emergency food supply that "Turns a Panic Into a Picnic" and is also advertised as "The Investment You Can Eat."

President's firm hand favored in coal strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Almost two-thirds of the American people think President Carter should invoke the Taft-Hartley Act to try to get the nation's coal miners back to work, at least for an 80-day cooling-off period, an Associated Press - NBC News poll indicates.

Slightly more than a quarter of those interviewed Tuesday and Wednesday said Carter should not seek the back-to-work order.

Invoking the little-used law is one of the options that Carter has been considering in an effort to end the 80-day walkout by the 160,000 striking members of the United Mine Workers union.

He said Thursday that he would not intervene immediately and still hoped a negotiated settlement can be reached. He said his decision about what to do "depends on developments today."

The back-to-work thrust of the Taft-Hartley Act was described briefly to each of the 1,600 adults interviewed by telephone. They were then asked if they thought Carter should invoke the act.

Sixty-five percent said Carter should order the miners back to work, while 28 percent opposed it. Seven percent were undecided.

Support for invocation of the law was broad, cutting across party, income, education, racial and regional lines.

There were no significant differences between Republicans, Democrats and independents on Taft-Hartley, nor between those describing themselves as liberal, moderate and conservative.

More than 60 percent of the residents of each of the major regions of the country were in favor of invoking the act.

Only slightly more support for the act was found among those with higher incomes and those with more education.

Under the Taft-Hartley Act, Carter can set up a fact-finding panel to determine if the strike constitutes a natiogency. If the board finds there is a national emergency, Carter can order the Justice Department to seek an injunction from a U.S. District Court ordering the miners back to work for an 80-day, cooling-off period.

The idea behind the "cooling-off" period is to get striking union members back to work while management and labor negotiators continue to try to reach a settlement.

But invocation of the act might not succeed in reopening the mines.

It didn't work for several days in 1946 when President Harry Truman obtained an injunction ordering striking miners back into the mines. The miners, led by John L. Lewis, ignored the injunction until massive fines were levied against Lewis and the union.

Union and state officials close to the strike situation have warned of possible violence in the minefields if the act is invoked.

Carter, through Labor Secretary F. Ray Marshall, could continue to mediate the negotiations, or the President could try "jaw-boning" — bringing pressure through public statements.

As with any sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News polls could differ from the results of interviews with all Americans because of chance variations in the sample. For polls with 1,600 interviews, the results should vary no more than 3 percent either way simply because of sample errors.

Air quality improves but bad areas remain

WASHINGTON (AP) — A majority of Americans breathe air that is considered harmful to their health despite evidence that the nation's air generally is cleaner than in the past, the Environmental Protection Agency said Thursday.

This conclusion is based on a new study by the EPA showing that air in nearly all major metropolitan areas — where most of the U.S. population lives — violates national pollution standards.

The EPA, which is responsible for enforcing pollution control laws, concluded that the nation's urban areas "must develop new strategies for continuing their progress towards meeting ... national air pollution standards."

EPA Administrator Douglas Costle said the findings show, "we still have many specific areas of the country — especially in our cities — where a significant clean-up task remains."

He noted, however, that since 1970 sulfur dioxide air pollution nationally has dropped 27 percent.

Lion Bo Isaeff, left, presents William Wuepper with the Club Winner Trophy provided by the Dublin San Ramon Lions Club.

DUBLIN — William Wuepper, a Dublin High School senior, was awarded the Club Winner Trophy for winning a speech contest sponsored by the Dublin San Ramon Lions Club.

The Student Speaker Contest was held Wednesday night at Dublin Corral Restaurant in Dublin. This contest is held annually in conjunction with Lions Club International.

This year's contest marks the 41st such event for Lions International. Contestants are vying for a $4500 scholarship.

After competing at zone level, winning contestants move up the ladder to district, regional, national and international levels.

Contestants must be enrolled in an accredited high school. Students in grades nine to 12 are eligible. Locally, California and Dublin high school students in those grades qualify.

California and Nevada comprise the "district" for this area.

The theme of this year's speeches is "Tomorrow's Energy, Today's Dilemma."

After delving into statistics regarding the energy crunch and possible alternatives, Wuepper concluded with the suggestion that voluntary conservation was the easiest and cheapest way to beat the energy shortage.

New tutor service plan

A tutoring center for Livermore schools is slated to open Mar. 1, providing extra academic help for students in all grades and a central location for district residents interested in closer involvement with classroom projects.

While a wide range of study areas is eventually planned for the center's Junction Avenue School location, its advisory committee has set reading and language-use tutoring as the first project.

All prospective tutors will be asked to take a free, six-session, two-hour training course to learn reading and tutoring techniques. The first series is scheduled for Wednesday, Mar. 1, from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. After six sessions tutors will be assigned students for individual work.

And while these times may be inconvenient for interested working people in the district, center head Elva Cooper said, "We'd love for the demand to be such that we would have to schedule evening classes."

Cooper, a high school and Chabot College teacher, stressed that persons who could immediately help fill the need for tutors would include parents, retired persons, businesspersons and noted a particular need for bilingual workers.

Kay Honodel, director of volunteers for the Livermore Valley Unified School District, noted the center would be open to students for only about three wee

Alva Cooper, heads the Livermore school district's new tutorial center slated to open March 1.

Mayors on line in Bowl-A-Thon

Mayors of Pleasanton and Livermore will battle each other in a bowling competition at the Elks Bowl-A-Thon, to be held Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 25 and 26 at the Amador Lanes, Dublin.

The event, a fund-raiser for the California-Hawaii Elks Major Projects to help finance aid to handicapped children, is sponsored by the B.P.O. Elks Lodge 2117.

Also battling it out on the alleys will be Richard Fahey, the president of the board of directors for the Dublin-San Ramon Services District, and Paul Ryan, DSRSD general manager.

The Bowl-a-Thon activities will take place from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the Lanes. Celebrity bowling will be held from noon to 2 p.m.

Ben Davidson, former lineman for the Oakland Raiders, will also play against Bob Tetak, manager of the Amador Valley Lanes.

Children with cerebral palsy and other handicapped kids will benefit from the event, in which local bowlers will contribute their time to bowl while raising money.

The Elks Major Project donates 97 cents of every dollar raised to the children, according to the local Elks group. So far, the California-Hawaii Elks have contributed and spent more than $13 million in these programs.

Chairman James Flynn and Bill Whittaker and their committee have made plans for several hundreds Elks and their wives from surrounding communities to take part in the Bowl-a-Thon.

Mini-sewer plant decision nearing

OAKLAND — Alameda County supervisors got a little closer to resolving the crucial question of whether to allow small "package" sewage treatment plants for developments outside cities yesterday.

They closed the public hearing on the matter and continued the issue to 10 a.m. April 13 when it appears they may make a decision.

From the Valley's point of view, the policy question focuses on whether all future outlying subdivisions larger than five lots will have to wait to hook up to the Valley's stalled municipal sewage treatment plants or can go ahead on relatively untested package plants.

The package plants have that name because they are smaller versions, to a degree, of the big municipal plants.

Yesterday the battle displayed two distinct sides.

One side believes that package plants are so new that they ought to be tested for the next 10 to 20 years before they are permitted for any new development. If they failed with a new development serving as the experiment in Alameda County, it's possible county taxpayers will be stuck with financing the corrections.

Furthermore, they would be in areas too remote to economically hook them up to existing municipal plants, compounding the problem.

A good way to test the plants would be to put them in areas like Happy Valley Road near Pleasanton where some septic tanks have failed and something must be done. If the package plants then fail, too, a municipal plant is not too far away.

It's even possible to "tie off" homes already connected to a municipal plant and do the testing, said several people on this side of the question.

Persons and groups supporting this position include the Valley chapter of the League of Women Voters, Preserve Area Ridgelands Committee, the county planning staff, and the Pleasanton City Council; was represented at the meeting yesterday by Council Member Joyce LeClaire.

Alameda County Water pistrict and City of Livermore are opposed to using package plants for new development and both agencies have asked the county to do an environmental impact report on the effects of the proposed policy. So far the county has refused, although ACWD has issued at least an implied threat of a law suit if the county continues to refuse.

On the other side of the issue, some say that the proposed policy should allow the package plants for new development in any areas planned for development where it's economically "unfeasible to hook up to a municipal plant.

Neil Nielson, an official of a package plant company, insists that his product is safe and has been tested in several areas. (Apparently it failed once because Supervisor Valerie Raymond asked the health department yesterday to look into that test result, too, and Neilson didn't challenge her statement.)

Paul Heck, who wants to develop approximately 100 units on the Pleasanton Ridge, thinks that even if the package plant fails, which he doubts, the county could form a service district to correct the situation and only the homeowners using the plant would foot the bill.

Herman Ruth, who has a general plan designation to develop homes on 400 acres near Chabot College's Valley campus, also favored the idea of allowing package plants for new development, his spokesman, Richard Karn, indicated.

Karn said informal talks indicate that Livermore won't annex the 400 acres and he feels that a sewage treatment system patterned after one in use on the Irvine Ranch in southern California would work well for Ruth's development.

Also backing up this position was Bonnie England of the Coalition of Labor and Business (COLAB). She said that opponents of this view are trying to oppose growth by attacking via the back door, namely, outlawing the package plants.

Supervisor Joseph Bort picked up on that notion and asked Margaret McClellan of the Valley League of Women Voters if she wanted supervisors to "use the sewage question for land use planning?"
